defensive position on the river Aisne, between Compiègne and Soissons.

Further west, the German detachments that held Amiens have moved northward to try to rejoin the German army of the right at St. Quentin. It is possible all the Germans in northwest France have done likewise; otherwise they would be in danger of being cut off in the center. Another detachment of the Germans has been given up and in the Argonne region a general retreat is taking place toward the forest of Bellemeuse and Briancourt.

The allies are pushing their advantage and doing their utmost to turn the retreat into a disaster by a stern pursuit on perhaps the broadest scale yet known in war. On the right they are in good position to continue the offensive, if the men and horses are not too tired for further effort. They are based on a strong line running from the Marais to the fortresses through the hilly country south of Argonne.

While the allies left composed largely of fresh troops, with a heavy force cavalry under General Pau, is wheeling around so as to drive General Von Kluck and Von Baelow towards Ardennes and Luxembourg, General Pau's army, by a few more marches by Laferrière and Loon, might cut communications between the retreating Germans and Belgium.

The British, who yesterday took nearly all the crossings of the river Aisne and captured many prisoners, are north of that river and are pushing the attack that would assist in forcing the Germans to evacuate Rheims. The British somewhere between Châlons and Rheims, is making an effort to recapture the latter city, which would be one of the most popular victories that could be announced to Frenchmen.

Should these movements be crowned with success and Laon and Rheims again fall into the hands of the allies, the Germans would have only one line of communication with Germany, through Rethel, and even that might be cut.

General Von Kluck, however, is looking for reinforcements from Belgium if they have not already reached him, and with these he might make another stand against his pursuers.

General French paid high compliments to latest addition to the British army, the flying corps, and he also quotes a letter from the French commander, General Joffre, who congratulated him on the accuracy of the information supplied by the aviators. These men have done little or no bomb throwing, but have confined themselves to gathering information about the enemy for the general staff.

This is the work that the military men always have and would prove the greatest service in connection with the use of the air plane. In what conflict they have had with German aviators, the British flying men, according to Field Marshal French, have "established individual ascendancy," and he adds, "something in the direction of mastery of the air already has been established."

The Belgians, who have received new big guns and reinforcements from somewhere, by a sortie from Antwerp, have prevented the Germans from sending more of their troops out of Belgium to the south.

It is reported that the Germans had another army corps ready to dispatch to the assistance of their right wing, north of Paris, but quickly stopped its departure when the Belgians showed their strength and ability to cut communication between Brussels and Louvain.

All the news coming in today seems to confirm the Russian reports that the Russians have inflicted another crushing defeat on the Austrians who, on the right, were supported by some German divisions. By the capture of Tomaszew, the Russians drove a wedge between the Austrian army, which had invaded Poland as far as Opole, Krasnystaw and Zamosc, and the army which they defeated at Lemberg and which although it lost heavily in killed, wounded prisoners, and guns, managed to reform to some extent and undertake the offensive.

The Germans who reinforced the Austrians according to latest advices, stared in the defeat. They are trying to reach the front at Przemyel, and the rear guard is endeavoring to keep off the Russian cavalry which is pursuing them.

Austria had in Poland and Galicia an army estimated at 1,000,000 men with 2,500 guns. At Lemberg, Austria lost many thousands of men in killed, wounded, and prisoners. It is now stated, although not officially, that the total number of prisoners amounts to 180,000, and that a thousand field guns were taken, besides the guns in the captured forts and an immense amount of war material. It also is reported today from Rome that the Germans have suffered a defeat at Miawa on the east Prussian frontier.

60,000 Dead in one day

The Times has this despatch from its St. Petersburg correspondent:

"The extent of the losses during the first six weeks of the war places all previous casualties far in the background. Not fewer than 10,000 dead Germans were counted in the trenches after one engagement in Eastern Prussia.

"On the fateful September 1 when two Russian corps came to death grips with four German corps north of Soldan, the losses of both sides totaled between 60,000 and 70,000 the majority being Germans—London Dispatch.
