Straws Show the Way the Wind is Blowing.

The lynching of Frank is no more than was expected by thinking people. The greater the disregard for the people's wishes, and the people are more often right than the officials, the greater the incentive to anarchy. Organized government for the people, by the people and of the people is all right and laws made by such are likely to be respected, but a government for the bosses, and laws put on the statute books without the sanction of the people, is entirely a different matter nor will the people be likely to have much respect there for. This is a nation ordained to be ruled by the consent of the governed and whenever the rights of the governed are being constantly restricted it is only a matter of time and opportunity for things to occur. It would not surprise us if the mob spirit does not soon extend its activities to public officials who deliberately ignore the will of the people. The day is coming when the people, to keep from being bound hand and foot as it were by official chicanery, will have to assert themselves. Let us hope the way lying official may see the danger in time to avoid it. Let us hope the people will take charge of their affairs in a quiet, dignified and determined way, before the foolish fan the smoldering coals into a blaze and mob violence, or bloody revolution.

What is Doing Across the Sea in the Way of Destroying Men and Property

London, Aug. 31.—The Russians thus far have blocked Teutonic efforts to force back their two extreme wings. At the northern extremity of the front, General von Buelow still is fighting for the bridgehead south of Friedrichstadt, while General Bothmer, who broke through the Russian lines in Galicia has been checked on the Stripsa River.

Along the rest of the front, the Germans claim to be making headway, although some who got through the forest region east of Ballystok have suffered a reverse at the hands of the Russian rear guard. The points of most interest, however, are at the two wings. The Germans near Friedrichstadt are well east of Riga and military experts here say that unless the Russians can dispose of a considerable force so as to threaten the Teutonic flank, it appears improbable that Friedrichstadt can be held much longer. The threat against the other wing is not so serious, as it is more distant and the difficulties of the country are too great for rapid advance.

In the West the French continue artillery attacks, but there is no evidence of a general offensive. The Italians report the capture of another strong Austrian position southeast of the Trent and of some Austrian trenches on the Casio on the road to Trieste.

Except for the Turkish official reports already published there is no news of the fighting Saturday and Sunday on Gallipoli Peninsula.

It is understood the Balkan negotiations are moving more quickly. The Bulgarian Minister had a long conference today with Sir Edward Grey, the British Minister of Foreign Affairs, after which the Ambassadors of the Entente Powers and the Serbian Minister called on the Foreign Minister.
