

Fifteen Labor Laws Passed By Last Congress

3 LABOR BILLS WERE VETOED BY PRES. HOOVER

Heavy Gains, However, Were Made By Organized Labor During The Last Session.

Organized Labor prevailed upon the members of the United States Congress to pass 15 measures of interest to the workers during the short session which began on December 2, 1930, and ended March 4, 1931, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor reported to the 1931 convention of the Federation at Vancouver.

The laws provide for: Prevailing rates of wages on public buildings in the United States and the District of Columbia.

Saturday half-holidays for nearly 600,000 government employees without reduction of wages and salaries.

Advance planning for public works to be constructed during depressions.

Creation of a Department of Labor in Porto Rico.

Extension of provisions of the Vocational and Rehabilitation Acts to Porto Rico.

Retirement Act for Panama Canal Railroad employees.

Adjustment of wages of certain employees in the Customs Service.

Appropriation of $500,000 additional to increase the border immigration patrol.

Appropriation of $178,000 to collect complete statistics of changes in employment, total wages paid and total hours of employment in the service of the Federal Government, the States and political subdivision thereof.

Modernization of three battleships in the government navy yards and arsenals at a cost of $30,000,000.

Requiring all work on 11 new destroyers at a cost of $51,700,000 to be performed in the navy yards and arsenals when it does not cost appreciably more than by contract. Ten million dollars appropriated to begin construction.

Extra compensation for overtime service performed by immigration inspectors and other employees of the immigration service.

Books for the adult mind. Appropriating an additional $500,000 for improving the United States Employment Service.

Increase of $200 in wages for railroad locomotive, Bureau of Safety and hours of service inspectors.

Organized Labor also prevailed upon the members of Congress to defeat the following four bills which were hostile to the interests of the workers:

Unification of the border patrols. Permitting waiving of jury trials. "Equal rights" amendment to United States Constitution.

Amendment of Volstead Act to permit raiding of homes without a warrant.

President Hoover vetoed three Labor bills. One provided for a national employment system to be set up in the Department of Labor, another provided a practical way of solving the Muscle Shoals problems, and the third increased the wages of 826 village letter carriers.

They'll Sit In Court As "Moral Influence"

New Orleans.—Woman's Christian Temperance Union committees to sit in the local courts "to help raise the standards of law enforcement in prohibition cases" will be appointed here, Mrs. Annie Swann, newly elected president of the local unit, has announced.

"We can do nothing toward furthering the cause of prohibition until we see it enforced," she said. "We can do nothing with the police, so we must deal with the courts. We must not let our enemies think we are asleep. We must form these committees and attend the court sessions whenever we can."

PRISONER KILLED

Raleigh—George Cashwell was shot to death when he, with five other prisoners, made a break for freedom at Caledonia prison camp. Cashwell, sent to prison from Alamance, had previously escaped twice.

When they first attend school children are under severe nervous strain.
