ELECTRIC SHOCKS TRAP FISH WORMS

Hillsboro, N. H.—Joseph Raines has solved the mudworm digging problem by the use of a storage battery and wires with a couple of long steel rods.

Young Raines goes out at dusk and when arriving a selected spot where worms may live he sticks a rod here and another there, turns on the juice and big night walkers squirm out of the soil to be put in the can for future use as bait.

DR. HOWARD R. OMWAKE

There has recently come to the Presidency of Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C., one who is well versed in the responsibility devolving upon him, both as an educator and executive. The years of training this gentleman has to his credit peculiarly fit him to be the chief executive of Catawba College. It is not only necessary for one who directs an institution of this character to have a splendid educational background, it is also very vital to have business training that will keep the educational flag flying under every condition which modern society presents.

Dr. Howard R. Omwake, graduate of Princeton University, with degrees of A. B. and A. M. bestowed by Princeton. He also has a degree of Doctor of Pedagogy from Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., and Doctor of Literature, an honorary degree from Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa.

We believe that in the years to come, Dr. Omwake will have demonstrated that Catawba College and the State of North Carolina were fortunate in having him assume the Presidency of Catawba College.

TARIFF SOUGHT TO HELP SITUATION IN THE SOUTH

Duty Free Product Has Made Inroads In Textile Industry, Statement Says.

If jute and jute products had not made such inroads upon cotton's legitimate and rightful markets, it is reasonable to say that the cotton textile industry would have already led other industries out of the depression, according to a statement issued at the office of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association.

The association is working for an adequate tariff on jute and jute products with the belief that this is necessary for the south's economic safety. It is pointed out in the statement that, with the cos of local, state and national governments constantly mounting, until between one-fourth and one-third of the national income is required for taxes, the farmer cannot raise cotton and hope to sell it at a fair price when it has to compete with a practically dutyfree product.

It is declared that the government should not so handicap the southern farmer in his struggle for economic independence and that the south's economic welfare is at stake in the demand for this tariff.

The statement continues by calling attention to the fact that a tariff on jute and jute products would raise a certain amount of revenue for the federal government and that the revenue thus received would tend to reduce the need for increased federal taxation.

To place an adequate tariff on jute and jute products in order to make it competitive with cotton would place no undue hardship upon those people who at the present are using jute rather than cotton, since the cotton manufacturers have so developed the technique of weaving in quality and quantity and design that there is a cotton fabric available for any use to which jute is now put, the statement continues.

Studies made by the Cotton-Textile Institute and the United States department of agriculture cite many instances where cotton is much more satisfactory than jute.

Variety Of Cats Hobby Of Woman In Illinois

Leroy, Ill.—Cats and kittens of all colors and a variety of breeds, all of whom are, strangely enough, guarded by a dog, are the hobby of Miss Clara Crumbaugh, of this city. She started her collection of felines five years ago, when a stray cat that wandered into her yard was adopted as a family pet.

The cats have a special building in which to live and the guard is a giant police dog. Some of the cats are registered and have won two prizes, others are nondescript.

When feeding time comes, Miss Crumbaugh makes an effort to see that each cat is fed. If some are absent at the time, powder is sprinkled on the backs of those that are fed so that the unfed may be separated later for their share of feed.

There will be twelve regional banks established by a board and representatives of Salisbury and other cities of the state met in Greensboro Tuesday to make an effort that a bank be located in North Carolina. If the conference is successful, the various cities will launch independent campaigns in an effort to have the bank locate in their own area.
