DEAD MAN GETS UP—DASHES AWAY

Wichita, Kan.—He was dead; no doubt about it.

His motorcycle struck a depression in the road. His body described an arc through the air and struck the pavement.

Two men dashed to him. Not a muscle twitched. Not a pulse or heartbeat could be detected. "Done for," the spectators agreed.

Three ambulances were screaming through the city to the scene. Coroner L. S. Markel was on his way.

Just as the first ambulance ground to a stop, the "dead" man stared wildly at those who were taking liberties with his person. He got up with such dispatch as to startle the growing crowd. He dashed to his motorcycle, mounted and disappeared in a rush of explosions and fumes. "Didn't even give his name," Markel commented.

Breakfast had been served in their bedroom. They had finished a long and bitter talk. Staperas told polic. He had reproached her for an affair with another man. For some time she sat silent. Suddenly she rose. "These are all I can give you, Peter," she said, tossing her wedding and engagement rings toward him.

CITY and COUNTY NEWS BRIEFS

CITY SEEKS BOND MONEY

The city council of Salisbury is to make demand upon three bonding companies for $37,523 to cover the shortage of George M. Lyerly, former city tax collector and treasurer.

The audit of the George M. Archer company was accepted at the regular meeting of the council last week and a committee appointed to make immediate demand for the bond money. There are a number of other items of apparent shortage, according to the auditor's report, but the amounts are so small it would not pay to have them verified.

The defalcations of the city officer extended over several years, during which time three different bonding companies were used. Lyerly is now serving five years in state's prison.

SUSPENDERS PROVE VALUABLE TO FARMERS

Powhattan, Kans.—Who says it does not pay to wear suspenders? Malcolm McElhorne, a farmer, knows they are good for something else than to hold up his breeches. A tornado was carrying McElhorne through the door of a barn a few nights ago when Oliver Whitney grabbed him by his suspenders and dragged him inside. Had it not been for the suspenders the tornado would have blown him away.

A few minutes later the barn was blown to bits but McElhorne and Whitney escaped without a scratch. Mrs. C. A. Henry was peeling potatoes in the house nearby. The pan was torn from her hands and set down out in the yard without spilling the potatoes. More than a dozen buildings were destroyed. Thousands of chickens and some hogs were killed.

Culinary Jingles by Virginia Gibson..

"Lady" in the days of old Meant a "loaf-giver," I've been told—Not to imply she was a loafer Who passed her days upon the sofa, But one who gave out bread quite stale For peasants to consume with ale.

Ladies and Bread. THE connection that exists between a lady and a loaf of bread has nothing to do with a cook and the family bread supply. The first meaning of the word "lady" as different from "woman" is based, as today, on social standing.

In the days of early England bread was baked only in the kitchens of

It was the duty of some woman of noble birth to distribute the stale loaves to the peasants, and since the word "lady" meant loaf giver, it came to be applied to a woman of refinement.

With such a system it is obvious that most people ate stale bread which, while nutritious, was hardly as palatable as we wish it today. As with everything else, we have speeded up and modernized our bread making until today in addition to yeast bread, we have the whole family of quick breads which are made as easily as a batch of biscuits and almost as quickly.

Bread has always been looked to as a valuable source of nutrition and these newest breads, when made with self-rising flour, which contains calcium and phosphate in its leavening agent, give us not only the valuable nutrition derived from the flour and milk in the loaf, but in addition add appreciable amounts of two minerals that are of vital need in building strong bones and teeth.

One of the most popular of these breads, particularly with children, is:

Peanut Butter Bread.
2 cups self-rising flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup peanut butter
1/2 cup milk

royalty. Its freshness on the table showed the social standing of the family. Those of royal blood had theirs when it was really fresh, the nobility had it the second day, the gentry ate theirs three days old, and finally it reached the masses.

QUICKER, BETTER RELIEF from use of Black-Draught

"I have taken Black-Draught, off and on when needed, for twenty-five years, for it is easy to take," writes Mr. George T. Wharton, of Petersburg, Va. "I take it for constipation and when I have that dull, tired feeling. I take it for colds and other complaints where a good laxative is needed, and I believe it gives me quicker and better relief than any other medicine I know. It certainly has been a help to me."

P.S.—If you have CHILDREN, give them the new, pleasant-tasting SYRUP of Theford's Black-Draught.
