Landslide Predicted For Dems.

Courthouse Filled Long Before Addresses Begin; Many Listen In Via Loud Speaker

Republican Administration Blamed For The Conditions Prevailing Throughout Country At The Present Time

Rowan county Democrats fired two big guns here last night. Congressman J. J. McSwain, Greenville, S. C., introduced by Lee Overman Gregory, local attorney, was the first big gun.

The second was R. R. Reynolds, Democratic nominee for the United States senate. He was introduced by C. P. Barringer, local attorney.

The meeting was presided over by Ross M. Sigmon, chairman of the Rowan County Democratic Executive committee.

Hundreds unable to obtain entrance in the courtroom on account of the large crowd, heard the addresses through the loud speaker set up on the courthouse porch.

Speaking in the courthouse before a capacity crowd, these two orators predicted an overwhelming victory on November 8th for the Democratic ticket. Both placed the blame for the depression at the door of the republican administration. Both declared a Democratic victory was the first big step towards the return of prosperity to this country.

Congressman McSwain decried the statement that the depression or "panic" originated abroad. He declared it was the result of republican policies which brought about the stagnation of international trade under the republican tariff. American industry, he said, as a result of republican policies, had been paralyzed.

Mr. McSwain dealt in detail with the foreign policy of America and traced the beginning of the depression to the tariff law enacted by a republican congress. He dealt mainly with national problems. He predicted a Democratic landslide November 8th.

Mr. Reynolds started off by expressing his appreciation for the hospitality and for the unusually large crowd of folks that had gathered to greet him. He said that he had come to this part of the State for the purpose of talking to the rank and file of the folks. Not alone to the rank and file of the Democratic party, but to the republicans as well. He said that the republicans were not responsible for the sins committed by their leaders and that thousands of them were deserting their party and were going to vote the Democratic ticket this year.

"And I," he said, "am going to be one who will extend them a most cordial welcome, I don't believe in cussing them, for I number among them in western North Carolina some of my warmest personal friends."

Mr. Reynolds spoke of the birth of the democratic party, telling how Thomas Jefferson realized that property must first start with the tillers of the soil and then work upward. Alexander Hamilton on the other hand, he said, believed that prosperity must start with those in the upper strata of life. He explained why Hamilton's idea could never work out successfully, although the republicans had tried it ever since the party was organized.

In discussing present-day conditions, the speaker said that the most nauseating thing in the country today was the republican party bowing to the wishes of Wall Street.

He said that prosperity—a lasting prosperity—could never return to the nation until a definite change of policy went into effect. He spoke on the tariff, he mentioned the farm loan board and he paid his respect to various other republican policies and doctrines. The audience applauded frequently and enthusiastically.

"The people want a change and they are going to have one," he said, adding "President Hoover got into the White House in 1928 because he promised us everything from a chicken in the pot, to the abolition of poverty. The people for some reason believed him. They thought he held the formula for prosperity. However, they have found out that all of his promises were pipe-dreams of a man who had nothing but a longing to get into public office. Now he is attempting to hold that office by giving us new promises, but this time in the place of believing him the people are laughing at him."

Recalling that he had been knocking on the Senate door for the past twenty years and finally it had been opened to him, Reynolds admitted that he is plenty smart.

"I'm smart because I've got sense enough to appreciate my limitations," the nominee asserted. "I'm smart because I know enough to seek the advice of men smarter than I am. And I'm smart because I'll always be just Bob Reynolds. When I'm elected I ain't going to puff up like a poisoned frog."

"I know you people favored me—you're my boss. And I'll stay in the Senate because I'll be the same Bob Reynolds to you. I want you to come to see me at any time."

"The national deficit is now around $3,500,000,000. The present annual cost of maintaining the government is likewise in the neighborhood of $3,500,000,000, of the $4,000,000,000 referred to as having been returned to the favored were now in our national treasury, there would probably be no deficit or talk about it and the amount would be sufficient to pay off government for an entire year."
