

Hamburg Steak is Food for Stars When Made the Lyda Roberti Way

Lyda Roberti, in her kitchen, gives her own version of hamburg steak, in which seasoning plays the important role.

LYDA ROBERTI, the saucy blond star who sang and danced her way into American hearts in "Pardon My English" and other Broadway musical offerings, has talents galore. Besides possessing an engaging voice and dancing feet, she speaks four languages and boasts the very feminine accomplishment of being an excellent cook. In spite of the busy fullness of her days, she finds time to practice at this latter art and often cooks her own little suppers in her own little kitchen.

Like most continentals, she has a keen appreciation for fine foods and is very particular about seasoning. "Most women do not realize," she says, "how important are those little dashes of this and that. Eating tasteless food is not eating at all. We in Europe have known, for instance, the which many people v sweeten, is a seasoner for meats. Used with salt and pepper it brings out the flavor and makes the steak, oh, so good."

One of Miss Roberti's specialties, to which her intimate friends are often treated at her home, is Hamburg a la Roberti—so christened by those same friends because she invented it and makes it more temptingly than anyone else on Broadway.

Hamburg Roberti
Mix one pound of hamburger with one teaspoonful each of sugar and salt, 1/4 teaspoonful of pepper, and make into flat, loosely mixed cakes. Cut rounds of bread two to three inches in diameter and toast on one side only. Spread the ground, seasoned beef on the other side and broil five minutes. Drop a bit of butter on each hamburger and serve tastefully garnished with sliced tomato or parsley.

This State Gets More Forest Camps

4 More Picked In Park Area Of The Smokies

Director Of Emergency Conservation Work Announces Locations

The director of emergency conservation work, better known as the forestry army, Robert Fechner, has announced the location of four additional civilian camps in western North Carolina as follows: Bradley Fork, Kephart Prong, Sun Crest and Long Creek. This makes a total of 13 camps that have been located in the western part of the state. All of the four foregoing mentioned are in the Great Smoky National park.

Accompanying the announcement of the new camp locations was the first statement of anything like a definite nature as to just what the army now being recruited is expected to do.

Special attention is to be given roadside clean-up as a fire hazard reduction measure along highways in the park-areas, while dead trees standing and trunks of old trees lying in the park areas are to be removed. Dead brush and other material of a highly inflammable character is to be removed while there is to be a general clean-up program for burned areas recently purchased or added to the national park system. It was also emphasized that special attention will be given to removing dead trees that are victims of disease, especially in the instance of chestnuts in the Smokies. It was stated that a limited amount of planting will be done in regions where natural reproduction cannot be counted upon within a reasonable time because destructive logging, fires or other causes have destroyed young seedlings and seed trees. Where natural reproduction is assured, no planting will be done.

One detail of the work which will be given special attention will be roadside fixation and erosion control, through the planting of native annuals, shrubs, or trees, along slopes to hold the soil in place. It was emphasized that a certain amount of necessary elementary construction is involved in the program, such as the building of fire-house lookouts, fire trails, truck trails, and simple telephone lines to lookouts, to assist in fire protection where such are needed.

It was very evident from the statement of the additional camps that the Great Smoky Mountain national park is to be given every element of attention possible as it is included in the list of parks favored by the allotment of 10,000 men, or 200 in each camp, to be engaged in national parks. The quota allotted to the Smoky Mountain park is therefore 800 who will be expected to be placed in the area as soon as they are recruited.

'Kiss Curl' Is Denied To London Policewoman

London.—Lipstick and law-enforcement do not blend, and kiss-curls are bad for criminology. So opines Commandant Mary Allen, chief of the Women's Auxiliary Police Service of London.

"It is really rather disgraceful," said Commandant Allen. "Women police should be disciplined in exactly the same way as men. Hair should be short and completely out of sight when on duty."

"I have noticed the little curls and I have noticed the obvious use of lipstick, too, in the case of a new Metropolitan policewoman."

"It not only horrifies me, it horrifies visitors from foreign countries who come here to see how our women police are organized."

"Then again, the uniform of the Metropolitan women police is all wrong. The idea, seems to have been to make it as much like a policeman's uniform as possible. Could anything be more absurd?"

"It is not difficult to find a smart, becoming, and, at the same time, feminine uniform for policewomen and the present one could be greatly improved."

Commandant Allen is strongly of opinion that all men and women police should be taught to use a revolver.

"I am not in favor of an armed police force," she said, "but the mere knowledge of how to use the weapon would be of great service to both men and women police when it comes to disarming a criminal who possesses a revolver."
