

Other Crops To Take The Place Of Cotton

Lands Should Not Lie Idle

Food, Forage, Grain And Soil Building Crops Should Take Cotton's Place

By P. H. Kime, Plant Breeder, North Carolina Experiment Station

The cotton acreage reduction plan recommends that those acres on which the cotton has been destroyed not be left idle during the remainder of the summer but that such acres be planted to other crops in order to utilize the fertilizer in the soil, to furnish food and feed crops needed on the farm and to build up the soil.

Crops which meet the approval of the acreage reduction plan are food crops for the farm families forage and grain crops for feeding the farm livestock, and soil building crops. The choice of the crop to be grown will depend on the needs of the individual farm, the cost of the planting seed, the labor requirements for growing the different crops, the time of planting and soil adaptation. Nearly all of farms in the cotton producing area need to grow more legumes for soil improvement. A large percentage of the farms could use more hay and grain for feeding the work stock, cows and hogs.

The cost of seeding these replacement crops should be relatively low. The seed will cost from one to two dollars per acre depending on the crop to be grown, and the method and rate of seeding. Labor should not exceed 50 cents per acre since the land is in a good state of cultivation.

Crops best adapted for planting at this time of the year are cowpeas, soybeans, Sudan grass, millet, corn and vegetables. Legumes should receive first consideration in this program as they have a wide variety of uses and also benefit the soil.

Cowpeas may be used for human consumption in both summer and winter, make excellent hay, may be pastured and at the same time enrich the soil, and cowpea seed are always in demand for planting purposes. Cowpeas may be planted up to July 15th but should be gotten in as early as possible. For seed purposes they should be planted in rows at the rate of 20 to 30 pounds per acre. The best varieties are Groi, Brabham, Whippoorwill, Iron and Victor. Clay, Black and Blackeye may also be grown. On wilt infested soils only the Iron, Brabham and Victor varieties should be planted. These three varieties are also resistant to root knot.

Soybeans also have a wide variety of uses. The seed may be grown for planting purposes. There is always a good market for Oroton, Laredo, Biloxi, Virginia and Herman seed for planting. The seed of the yellow seeded varieties may be used for oil or exported. The hay is of very high quality, and most farms could use larger amounts to advantage. Soybean pasture supplemented with corn may be used to produce a cheap supply of pork for home consumption, and when utilized in this way the soil is greatly benefited. Soybeans may be planted up to July 10 or 15 but should be planted earlier if possible. For seed purposes plant in rows and cultivate.

Mr. J. H. Nail has quite a menagerie which he proposes to carry to the annual Masonic picnic at Mocksville next week and exhibit for the benefit of the orphans. It consists of foxes, white rats, alligators, horned frog, a little negro has toes on her hands instead of fingers. The frog looks like a cross between a turtle and frog. It has a tail and horns.

Mayor Neave has a telegram from DeSair, La., a few days ago, descriptive of a negro who was fleeing from that place on charge of burglary and arson. On Wednesday our vigilant police had the fugitive in limbo.

Textile Code Is Opposed By Workers

The North Carolina district of United Textile Workers, Piedmont Textile council in a meeting at China Grove this week opposed a proposed code in the industry because "a minimum wage will not provide a decent standard of living."

C. W. Bolick, textile organizer, said 12 towns were represented at the meeting, which opposed the code on grounds that "it discriminates between southern and northern workers when products are sold in the same market, and exempts certain classes of employees, giving manufacturers the opportunity to defeat the purpose of the industrial act by classing skilled employees as apprentices and cleaners."

Merchants Lay Plans To Fight N. C. Sales Tax

At their annual convention this week in Winston-Salem, the North Carolina Merchants Association went on record against the state sales tax and the proper officials were authorized to employ counsel to fight the sales tax levy, if, in their opinion, opposition in the courts would be feasible.

During the convention, bitter tirades against Governor Ehringhaus, the last general assembly and Commissioner A. J. Maxwell were voiced.

A. W. Bunch of Statesville was elected president of the association. Other officers named were: David Owens, Charlotte, first vice president; J. G. Harrison, Mt. Airy, second vice president; W. L. Dowell, Raleigh, executive secretary, and T. C. Hinkle, Lexington, treasurer.

Directors elected include the officers and L. L. Lee of Asheville; O. A. Swearingen, Concord; Baxter H. Miller, Durham; T. M. Hunter, Fayetteville; C. Roy Morris, Gastonia; C. E. Coggins, Halmet; Paul W. Bumgarner, Hickory; W. F. Dowdy, New Bern; F. L. Garner, Reidsville; Edwin Earle, Jr., Salisbury, and Ira W. Hine, Winston-Salem.

The directors are to meet shortly in Raleigh to decide what action will be taken on the proposed contesting of the constitutionality of the sales tax and where the 1934 convention will be held. The date has not been set.

Lyerly Answers City's Suit

George M. Lyerly, now serving a term in the state penitentiary for embezzlement, this week filed his answer to the city's suit to recover approximately $25,000.00 from Lyerly and Hartford Accident and Indemnity company.

Lyerly denied that he was the elected, qualified or acting city treasurer and also declared that the fee charged by the auditing company investigating his records, was excessive.

Lyerly also entered a denial as the various shortages alleged.

New Dentist

Dr. E. Carr Choate has opened an office over Purcell's drug store, on the square, and will be in Salisbury for the practice of dentistry on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In addition to his Salisbury office, Dr. Choate will practice in Mocksville on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. E. C. Choate is a brother of Doctors G. W. and J. Walter Choate of Salisbury.
