Captain Bob Bartlett Again Enroute to Far North

SOMEWHERE south of the Arctic circle, the tiny fishing schooner, Effie M. Morrissey, today is ploughing her way through northern seas on a 15,000 mile voyage from New York to the east coast of Greenland. It is the third Norcross-Bartlett expedition to regions ice-locked for eleven months of the year, and the ninth trip of its kind for the Morrissey which in her adventuresome career has logged 150,000 nautical miles.

The expedition is in charge of Captain Robert A. Bartlett, the skipper-owner of the Morrissey, and Arthur D. Norcross, New York publisher and sportsman. Co-operating are the Smithsonian Institution, the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, and the American Museum of Natural History.

In addition to exploring unknown lands, ice permitting, the expedition hopes to bring back plants and wild-fowl, oceanographic, meteorological, and archaeological specimens. Of the 28 men on board, 14 are scientists, and unusual precautions have been taken for their health and comfort.

There is an electric refrigerator and by contrast 25 tons of coal in her hold for the steam-heating system. Lumber for making dog sleds and steel drums of fuel oil for the Diesel engines, that drive her through the ice floes, are lashed on deck. There are nets for scooping tiny plankton from the ocean and high power rifles for killing seal and walrus.

The food supply is as large as possible, in case the ship is frozen in for the winter, and consists of almost everything good to eat that can be jammed on deck or below. There are nets of onions, sacks of potatoes and flour, canned goods of every kind, hams and slabs of bacon sealed airtight in heavy paper containers, butter especially packed in tins, canned pineapple from Hawaii, and bottles of lime juice.

The pineapple and lime juice, Captain Bartlett explains, are to ward off the dreaded scurvy, menace of mariners since the days of Columbus. However, the lime will not be used except in cases of extreme emergency.

This is because recent scientific research has shown that in addition to being delicious, canned pineapple contains more known nutritive values than any other fruit. The juice also quenches thirst, an important factor on inland expeditions where the water supply is melted snow or ice.

On such trips away from the ship, the explorers will carry cans of pineapple, dried beef, and hard tack. Without fruit the men certainly would develop scurvy as the only other diet known that will prevent it is fresh meat and nothing else. In the Arctic the only such meat is seal, walrus and polar bear.

It isn't necessary to kill an enemy. You just place a bee in his sedan and let nature take its course.

If you groan and wail, you're a sissy; if you suffer in silence like a he-man, the doctor thinks you aren't sick.

Mayor Puts Ban On Nude Dance At World Fair

Chicago—Dancing in the nude at various shows at the Oriental Village and other places along the midway at the World's Fair was halted by the various concessionaires because of an edict by Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who visited the fair the other night and saw a "lady Godiva" ride a camel and a woman dancing without clothing.

The Mayor warned the concessionaires they'd have to tone down the performances and as a result crowds that flocked into the fair grounds saw a fan dancer dance in trunks and a brassiere instead of just fans. One show, in the "Slums of Cairo," was closed by a policeman after an investigator had watched a performance of a female impersonator.

The Mayor's move was praised by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the fair, who said: "We welcome this help and cooperation on the part of the duly constituted officials, whose duty it is to see that the laws are enforced. There is certainly a limit to these dances and exhibitions and I believe that the limit has been passed."

Nations Seek Favors In Case Repeal Voted

Washington—The foreign powers already are clamoring to get a favorable treatment for their wines, whiskies and beers in case the eighteenth amendment is repealed.

France and half a dozen other nations have sounded out American officials in London and Washington on the possibility of tariff trades on alcoholic beverages.

The line up of Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama for prohibition repeal, many diplomats say, has persuaded them that the American market will be opened to liquor imports by the end of this year. Naturally, they want information about the tariff policy this government will adopt in connection with foreign beverages—and concessions, if they can get them.

Portugal, Great Britain, France Spain, Germany and Italy were the countries from which the United States extensively imported pre-Volstead beverages.

The imports of alcoholic drink into the United States in 1913 totaled over 17,000,000 gallons with a value of $20,743,129.
