

Sen. Reynolds Hits Saloons TO HOLD RACE ELECTION NOV. 21

Washington — The Administration's policies begin to become clearer week by week...

For example, it now seems quite clear that there will be no such inflation of the currency as seemed possible a few weeks ago.

There will be money provided for the payment of depositors in most of the closed banks...

While the NRA has not yet done all that was expected of it, and the "Blue Eagle" agreements are only temporary...

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, under George Peek, is doing its job faster...

Increasing concern is being manifested over the increasing number of strikes in various industries...

There seems little doubt that when it comes to a showdown the influence of labor will weigh the heavier...

Says Leaders Are Against Its Return

Wet Speaker Scores Dry Argument That Repeal Will Bring Back The Open Saloon.

PRESIDENT IS OPPOSED

Senator Wants Government To Receive Just Proportion of Taxes From Liquor Sales.

Pressing his whirlwind campaign for the repeal of the 18th amendment into Warren county before an audience that overflowed the courthouse...

"My platform announced more than two years ago," he said, "emphatically declared that I would always oppose the open saloon, and I renew that pledge."

"President Roosevelt has said that he would always oppose the return of the open saloon."

"The Democratic national platform declares that the party will always oppose the return of the open saloon."

"Every responsible leader I know in both parties pledges you that they will always oppose the return of the open saloon."

"In the face of those solemn pledges and that array of evidence I am unable to see how our friends of the opposition have the face to continue with their only argument."

Senator Reynolds said that he wants the government to derive its just proportion of taxes from the liquor which is now being sold and which will always be sold, he declared.

The attempt at prohibition has cost the federal government more than 50 million dollars a year, Senator Reynolds said, and the only thing it has prohibited is the revenue the government is entitled to.

On the other hand he stated, it has provided fabulous wealth for the bootleggers and the gangsters who used those illicit funds to build up an empire of underworld corruption.

Problems In The Repeal

Roosevelt May Call Special Session Of Congress, Observers Say.

Some observers in Washington expect President Roosevelt to call a special session of congress late in November or early in December to deal with problems which will arise if repeal of the prohibition amendment is accomplished by the first week of December, as wets predict it will be.

The question of regulating the importation of liquors; steps to see that the federal government protects dry states, as the twentieth amendment provides, and the question of liquor taxes are subjects which would be considered, it is pointed out.

Importation of liquor will be encouraged, it is predicted, because supplies on hand in the United States are expected to be inadequate. Import duties will have to be arranged. Domestic taxes on liquor present the problem of whether the federal government shall take all the revenue, or whether it shall be divided with states.

Enforcement of state dry laws will be in the hands of the Department of Justice, which recently absorbed the prohibition enforcement unit in its own bureau of investigation.

Tammany In Struggle To Regain Power

Once again in the cycle of years New York's Tammany is fighting to retain its political powers. Mayor John P. O'Brien, Tammany candidate, left, asks reelection. Joseph V. McKee, center, "Recovery Party" candidate, said to have Washington support, is running as Independent Democrat, and Fiorello H. La Guardia, right heads the Fusion ticket.

Fines and Jail Terms For Cheaters Of "Blue Eagle"

A two-edged executive order designed to enforce compliance with the blue eagle provisions of the presidential re-employment agreement has been issued by President Roosevelt. The order calls for a fine of $500 and six months imprisonment for any person falsely representing himself to be operating under the agreement or displaying the blue eagle insignia while not complying with its provisions. It also ordered Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, to prescribe further rules amplifying those laid down by the Chief Executive.

The action followed closely upon removal of the blue eagle from the first establishment accused of violating their agreement.

Gen Johnson ruled, under the second section of the order, that any person violating the agreement must forfeit the blue eagle and may not display it again without written permission.

Literally scores of complaints have been received by the NRA of violations of the re-employment agreement, and this order of the President is seen as providing means of punishing "cheaters."

At the same time Gen. Johnson announced that plans are being worked out to establish local boards throughout the country to investigate reports of profiteering by merchants. In most cases investigated thus far, Johnson said, price increases have been found to be justified.

Will War On Gold Hoarders

The federal Department of Justice has instructed attorneys in all parts of the country to prosecute all persons who hold gold illegally in amounts greater than $1,000. The federal ban against gold hoarding applies to all amounts in excess of $100, but it is said that prosecution of holders of amounts less than $1,000 is to come later.

Attorney General Cummings has let it be known that the government will aid district attorneys in drawing up indictments.

The department of Justice also will furnish reports covering all cases of gold hoarding.

The first person actually indicted on charges of gold hoarding is a New York attorney named Cummings. His trial is regarded as a test of the federal regulations.

Asheville—Jack Moody, who said he was wounded in a duel with a mysterious Quixote over a mountain lass, was given eight months suspended jail sentence for accepting a challenge to duel.

GOOD MORNING

TRYING, ANYWAY "Hey you can't turn around in the middle of the block." "Oh I think I can, officer; just give me the time."

GETTING HER GOAT

Mr. Sass—But, darling, you've been talking for half an hour, and I haven't said a word. Mrs. Sass—No, you haven't said anything—but you've been going in a most aggravating manner, and I'm not going to stand it.

EXCEPTION

Bride—You didn't talk that way before we were married— Groom—What way? Bride—You said you would go through fire and water for me, and now you refuse every time I ask you for money. Groom—But I never said I'd go through bankruptcy for you.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

"Daughter, you are entirely too haughty. No man will ever sue for your hand." "Well, that will save me from suing for divorce."

THE VOGUE

Husband—One more payment and the furniture's ours. Wife—Good. Then we can throw it out and get some new stuff.

HIS JOB

Professor—Wake that fellow next to you will you? Student—Aw, do it yourself, you put him to sleep.

HIS VERDICT

Wife—How do you like my new hat? Husband—I liked it better on the milliner's stand.

SOURCE

Local Barber—Haven't I shaved you before sir? Victim—No, I got that scar in France.

NO REAL DANGER

Wife—Bill wake up. There are burglars in the pantry eating my mince pies. Bill—Well it doesn't matter does it so long as they don't die in the house?

WON AND LOST

"What's happened? Have you had an accident?" "No, I just bet Hans he couldn't carry me up a ladder on his back, and I won."

CHEAPER

Dentist—This set will cost you five dollars. Patient—Haven't you got any buck teeth?

DELAYED

Visitor—Does the giraffe get a sore throat when he gets wet feet? Attendant—Yes, sir, but not until the next week.

A WORD OF WARNING

The telephone rang in the fire station. "Is this the fire station?" asked a timid voice. "Yes," replied the fireman. "Well, I've just built a new rock garden and I—"

"Where's the fire?" asked the fireman. "Some of the new plants are very expensive and—"

"Look here," said the fireman at last "Where's the fire?" "I was coming to that," said the voice. "My neighbor's house is on fire, and I don't want you clumsy firemen tramping over my rock garden."

DOG CARRIES HOME $10 THAT MASTER HAD LOST While shopping around, Fred Garlow, of Cody, Wyo., lost a $10 bill. He searched for it without success. The next morning when he went to feed his Chesapeake retriever, the animal was carefully guarding the bill after carrying it home. Garlow has trained the dog to pick up anything he drops.

Rowan County Will Vote On Horse Racing

Election Ordered By County Commissioners After Petition Is Presented.

McCANLESS IS LEADER

Horse Racing With Pari-Mutual Betting To Be Decided By Voters.

The special election for the legalization or rejection of horse racing and pari-mutual betting in Rowan county has been called for Tuesday, November 21 by the Board of County Commissioners at a special meeting held on Monday.

The election was ordered after a petition bearing some 2,500 signatures was presented to the commissioners. W. F. McCannless, a member of the City Council head the petitioners and is a prime mover in the effort to secure the endorsement of this sport for Rowan county.

The race course owned by Mr. McCannless and located at the Rowan Fair grounds is the proposed site for the horse racing tracks. This being one of the finest race tracks between Washington and Florida.

Polk county voters approved the legalization of races in a referendum several months ago, but so far as is known here, no action has been taken toward instituting the sport there. Pasquotank county rejected a similar proposal by a slight margin.

E. W. Tatum Dies At Home Here

E. Walter Tatum died Saturday night at his home on South Ellis street from a throat infection with which he had suffered for six months. The funeral was conducted from the home Monday morning at 11 o'clock and interment was in Chestnut Hill cemetery.

Mr. Tatum was a native of Jerusalem, Davie county, being a son of Samuel Jesse Tatum, and was 58 years old. He came to Salisbury in 1893 and has since made his home here.
