

"Only Pay Rolls Will Help Us" Why Not An R. F. C. For Industry?

In bridging the way from Depression to Recovery, Uncle Sam has erected a fine structure with government loans.

But it will be impossible for the vast majority of Americans to cross this bridge into the promised land of prosperity until the draw shown in the cartoon is let down.

Failure to provide loans for industry will hold up indefinitely the march out of the economic wilderness. Loans to banks, agriculture, insurance companies and railroads form but a part of the bridge—not by any means the whole bridge.

Industry is the real connecting link between the recovery machinery that already has been set up and actual recovery itself. Without industrial progress the program cannot proceed on its own, for industry provides the creative power—the one road to payrolls. Put men and women to work, give them an opportunity to earn wages, and recovery will follow automatically.

To do this, industry needs the same kind of government assistance that already has been given to the banks, railroads, insurance companies and agriculture. It needs long term credit in the form of working capital loans.

Loans to banks to replace depreciations of securities, their inventories—save stockholders and depositors but remain a frozen un-human something that weaves not, neither does it spin.

Loans to insurance companies save stockholders by replacing depreciations of their securities. The loans have not saved one policy for one poor person that had lost his job and couldn't pay his premiums.

Loans to railroads have saved bondholders, given some labor but have mainly been again to replace depreciation and save capital—investment—they have not made one more pound of freight to carry or created one dollar of wealth.

Loans to China, etc., may be helpful to take up stocks but are not creative of either consuming or purchasing power here.

These examples could go on ad infinitum all with the same answer—the same song over and over again.

Industry makes freight for railroads to carry—it makes necessary human travel—it pays wages so men and women can pay their insurance premiums and have money to deposit in banks.

When banks have deposits insurance companies are paid premiums and carriers have normal freight and passenger service. They need no loans.

All these things happen when industry is able to employ labor and replace its working capital depleted by the self same depreciations that affected banks, insurance companies and railroads.

Armory-Auditorium At Charlotte Already Engaged For Meeting

EXPECT 3,000 TO ATTEND

State Chairman To Be Elected, And Candidates For Office To Be Nominated

The biennial Republican state convention will be held at the Charlotte armory-auditorium Wednesday, April 4, James S. Duncan, of Greensboro has announced.

Mr. Duncan said he would send out the official calls within the next two weeks. He said he had already definitely engaged the armory-auditorium and was expecting an unusually large attendance.

The convention will have around 1,200 delegates and 1,200 alternates, said Chairman Duncan, and will attract a large number of unofficial guests.

Of principal interest, perhaps, will be the election of a state chairman. Mr. Duncan is expected to be renamed, possibly without opposition, although Louis Hamilton of Brevard and William Meekins of Hendersonville, son of Judge Isaac M. Meekins, federal judge, have been mentioned as possible successors.

The Republicans will also have before them the task of nominating three candidates for the North Carolina supreme court, including a candidate for chief justice; a candidate for North Carolina utilities commissioner, and a candidate for state treasurer. It will also be the duty of the convention to confirm the choice by nine judicial districts of candidates for superior court judgeships.

The candidates for the superior court bench will be named at judicial district conventions to be called by the chairman, who will also call or order called call county and precinct conventions. Another function of the state convention will be to indorse the Republican candidates for congress and make plans for vigorous campaigns in their behalf throughout the state, said, Chairman Duncan.

In the tenth congressional district Frank Patton of Morganton, former district attorney of the western North Carolina federal district, is expected to be given the congressional nomination.

An itinerant musician was stranded in a village one Sunday morning, and as he was playing his cornet in the street he was approached by the clergyman of the parish, who said, "Do you know the Fourth Commandment, my good man?"

TWO WAKE COUNTY MURDERS

Two brutal murders occurred in Wake county, Saturday. At Wake Forest, Clay Mullen, 35, was shot through the back of the head as he fled from Zollie Coffey, merchant and sawmill operator. Otis Andrews, 12, was killed in his Raleigh home by a shot through the heart fired by his uncle, Joseph Andrews, 18.

When Oscar Phillips started his cotton reduction campaign in Mecklenburg County recently 1192 farmers took part in the opening meetings and indications were that the growers would sign the adjustment contract 100 per cent.

Parasites Affect Dairy Calves

The early spring months are the worst time of year for cattle lice, particularly on calves, according to R. H. Ruffner, head of the State College animal husbandry department.

Cattle infested with lice cannot be thrifty, he said, and they frequently lick and rub their skin until the hair comes off in great patches around the tail-head, neck, and withers.

The best treatment consists of washing the animal with a solution of one ounce of sodium fluoride to one gallon of water, Ruffner said. The liquid should be applied over the entire body and worked in well with a brush around the back and sides and with a rag under the belly and neck and between the legs.

A clear day is best for the treatment, so that the animals will dry off rapidly. After the liquid has been applied the animals should be rubbed until almost dry, then allowed to stand quietly.

All manure should be cleaned out of the bars and the walls and floor swept and disinfected thoroughly.

In inspecting animals for lice, it is well to examine them closely around the neck, dewlap, back, and rump.
