

RAMBLING ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

"Bunk, hoey or baloney" is the way you'd receive it if you saw it on the stage on in the movies. But it actually happened in a New York suburb. Edward Barrett in a house flooded with deadly fumes from a defective furnace tried to telephone for help. He fainted immediately after he removed the receiver from the hook. When the telephone operator got no reply to her "Number please?" she notified a tester who sent a repairman to the house. The repairman and two police found Barrett unconscious, took him to a hospital. He lives!

For fifteen year there has been a skeleton at the annual feast of the Elite Headwaiters Association. It was prohibition . . . But in 1934 reception and ball was all smooth sailing. Repeal was here, and its spirit was genuine. At last the headwaiters, or "Maitre D's," as they like to call themselves, find that their hotel dining rooms are once more well filled. The speakies no longer compete! "You see, our customers have come back, yes," said the president. "We see our dining rooms full. It is possible now to eat like a human being instead of a beast. But how many remember how to do so?" Even now, this last week I have seen a party drink that stuff, that gin and orange juice from the soup to the salad and then the ices," cried another. . . Two or three years is the time that they give to the American public to learn once again, to eat properly and to take 11 p. m., as the appropriate time for dining," said another. "Then we can cook with civilization."

Hobbies, more hobbies . . . And if you've never seen a fencing match, it's difficult to realize how graceful a hobby fencing can be. And March is the time for the important contests at the exclusive Little Fencers Club in East 53rd Street. And such resounding names among the women contestants and directors: Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Charles H. Voorhees, Mrs. Harold van Buskirk, Miss Maude Van Courtlandt Oakes, Miss Maria Cerra, Miss Amy von Hansa!

"There's less immorality in a nudist camp than on Park Avenue," says the publisher of four magazines that have just been barred from New York newsstands. And he talks of his magazine this way: "I truly believe it's an education. Take a girl of 18 or 20. They get educated in the sex life and are better able to defend themselves." . . . Ho, hum. Four of his magazines are "La Paree," "Spicy Stories," "Pep," and "Gay Parisienne."

The steel work of the Knickerbocker Village low-cost housing project is up some six stories or more, and occupancy is slated for December of this year. Knickerbocker Village replaces the old "Lung Blocks" of the lower East Side, and is planned as a community of medium rental apartments for white-collar workers.

If you want to have your home town remain a live place, you must give that town some share of your life by doing some active work in its behalf.

Got Over Weak, Painful Condition By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Baranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor. My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all."

For over 50 years, Cardui has been helping women just as this Texas lady describes above. Cardui is sold at all drug stores.

In the good old days we used to weep when they read the sentimental poem "Over the hill to the poorhouse," but in these times so many eminent citizens have gone there, that it has become one of our most popular resorts.

Traveling Around America

One of the magnificent views enjoyed on a trip through the Yosemite in California.

Two attractive Indian girls of Guatemala.

THESE "Three Brothers" of the Yosemite and the two little sisters of Guatemala are fascinating flashes from the passing show enjoyed by travellers taking the land-sea way round America. So varied are the attractions of our own continent that globe trotters who have been sailing the seven seas in search of new travel thrills are turning to the Americas in ever increasing numbers, and are discovering that they offer mountain scenery as magnificent, peoples as interesting and ruins as ancient as any of the Old World shelters.

The superb natural beauties of our National Parks like the Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Zion and others, and the Spanish Americans with their mysterious buried cities and intriguing native villages, lie on the route of the weekly rail-water circle tours between New York and California which cover the trip between our two coasts, one by rail and the opposite, by sea—through the Panama Canal and the Central Americas. The Yosemite, one of the most beautiful of our national parks, presents scenery as spectacular as can be found anywhere on the globe. There are hoary-headed mountains and sheer cliffs that slit the sky five thousand feet overhead; colorful crags cut into all sorts of grotesque shapes by glaciers which swept over our continent thousands of years ago; great groves of giant trees so huge that a roadway has been tunneled through one of them—so ringed with years that they are the world's oldest living things.

Here also in our so-called New World are Indian tribes of Guatemala and Mexico whose ancestors, the Mayas, dwelt on our continent hundreds of years before the white man's arrival; and relics of cities so ancient their origin is still shrouded in mystery.

Too Fast For Conditions

A motorist unable to stop when the unexpected happens is driving too fast for conditions. On icy roads in order for a car equipped with four-wheel brakes to stop in 126 feet, speed should not exceed 18 miles per hour. On snow-covered roads, to be able to stop in 126 feet, speed should not exceed 25 miles an hour. On wet road surfaces, a peed around 35 miles an hour will permit a stop to be made in 126 feet, and on good dry roads, to stop in the same distance, speed must not be over 40 miles per hour.

The moral to driving is that speeds must be determined by road conditions and other factors of traffic.

Says Poultry Code Will Aid Growers

The need for high grade eggs by hatchers operating under the code and the market demands for good eggs for human consumption offers an incentive to poultrymen to improve the quality of their flocks this year, says C. J. Maupin, poultry specialist at State College.

Under the commercial breeders and hatchers code, an adequate price must be paid producers for their eggs, so they can afford to devote more attention and money to bettering their flocks.

The elimination of disease, particularly bacillary white diarrhea, and the lowering of the death rate of young chicks can be accomplished by cleaning the houses often, providing wood or concrete floors where dirt floors have been used, and keeping different flocks segregated in different yards. Builders lime spread liberally around the premises has been found a big help in stamping out disease.

The College plan of blood-testing for the diarrhea has shown conclusively that sanitation is an important factor in eradicating this disease. Other infections are likewise reduced by cleanliness.

Since the hatcherymen must keep an accurate check on the cost of feet.

production of both custom hatching and baby chicks, with egg costs figuring high in the total outlay, they will be especially interested in procuring eggs from which healthy, livable chicks will hatch.

This means that flock owners must introduce new blood into their flocks frequently to avoid too close in breeding, and should know enough about the different strains to mate the birds for the best results. New males should be introduced every two or three years.

It was pointed out that premiums will be paid for eggs from flocks which have been improved.

We need to worry about frost in the ground, but we got to find some way to get it out of people's feet.
