

New Explosive Is Revealed In Hunt

Death From Water Formula Promises Another War Horror

Paris—In their round-up of persons suspected to have engaged in a world-wide espionage plot, the Paris police have seized a sensational document.

It is a secret formula, the application of which may revolutionize industry—and warfare. For it describes a new explosive force, 48 times greater than the most powerful chemical explosive at present in use.

The document shows how this deadly explosive can be manufactured from water, at an exceptionally low cost.

The formula was found among a heap of documents and charts, which members of the French C. I. D. seized when they searched the rooms of a Yugoslavian chemist, named Vatroslav Reich, who has been employed at one of the state laboratories here for some time past.

Inquiries indicate that the invention is the result of 14 years' research by a German scientist named Hausmeister, in his private laboratory in the little Black Forest township of Goeppingen in Wurttemberg.

Two years ago he submitted the results of his experiments to an industrial group in Germany.

In the course of experiments which they carried out under the direction of reichwehr experts, an explosion took place in which seven men lost their lives.

Hausmeister refused to have anything further to do with the German group. He approached in turn other big industrialists in Europe and America. All of them, however, refused to finance the enterprise avowedly because the practical application of the Hausmeister method would reduce the value of every coal and oil share in the world.

One European power tried hard to obtain the invention, but Hausmeister refused to entertain their proposals. They did not abandon hope. They knew of the existence in Paris of an international espionage organization run on business principles and prepared to steal anybody's secrets to the highest bidder. They had done business with this organization before.

He Can Pull The Load If-- Uncle Sam Will Help Him, Too

INDUSTRY can pull the entire recovery program along to better times, provided—

(1) That it is turned about by Uncle Sam and headed in the right direction.

(2) That it is strengthened and made physically able to pull the load expected of it.

(3) That it gets some of the same Federal RFC help that went to the banks, railroads, insurance companies, agriculture, etc.

President Roosevelt recently emphasized the need of loans to Industry as a method of maintaining and increasing payrolls and putting more persons to work. He knows the horse can't pull the load anywhere unless it is started off right.

He's for a New Deal to Industry, too, and the sooner this part of the program gets moving the sooner we'll all be headed for better times.

This depression, as has long been pointed out, was chiefly an Industrial depression, though Industry of itself was not the cause of it. Industry was forced into hard times when working capital shrank, when bank assets froze, when money became so tight that purchasing ceased.

Conditions far beyond the control of Industry made the curtailment of production necessary. And when production was curtailed, people were forced out of work and off of payrolls, thus increasing unemployment.

With the general improvement in conditions, people are buying again and demand is increasing. But Industry, hard hit these many months of idleness, cannot in many cases resume operations on a scale that will meet the demand and cannot increase its payrolls by putting more people to work unless the government steps in with the same kind of assistance it had to give the banks, insurance companies and others when their capital was depreciated.

When Uncle Sam gets around to providing these federal loans to Industry, the recovery program will begin moving more rapidly in the right direction.

Highway Revenue Is Soaring High

New cars and greater use of the highways of the state have sent highway revenues soaring beyond estimates of the last legislature. Gasoline and motor license taxes continued to mount in April, and overshadowed the failure of general fund revenues—which are relied upon for salaries of teachers and departmental employes—to meet estimates.

Result of collections for the first ten months' operations under the 1933-34 revenue law are revealed in an official report of the state department of revenue. The outstanding feature of the report was the fact that highway collections had already passed estimates for the entire year with two months still left to go.

Highway fund revenue for the ten months of the current fiscal year through April totalled $19,386,698.44 as compared with a legislative estimate approximately $19,000,000 for the whole period.

Failure of the general fund to keep abreast of estimates was traceable to the 3 per cent general sales tax, which must yield approximately $1,000,000 a month in May and June to reach the estimated yearly receipts from that source.

General fund collections through April totalled $18,685,988.31, of which $4,877,951.15 represented sales tax receipts. That source was expected to yield between $7,000,000 and $7,500,000 this current fiscal year.

Highway collections in April totaled $1,595,659.33, while general revenues were $1,094,388.38, including $632,515.46 from the sales tax.

April, with its touches of warm weather, also brought beer taxes up, but the ten months total from that source reached only $256,506.03, and it is not expected that the beer collections for the fiscal year will exceed $300,000. The legislature estimated that the beverage tax would yield anywhere from $400,000 to $1,000,000 a year.

Income taxes for 1934 still are below collections of 1933, despite the increases in rates in the lower brackets. The drop is due to sharply curtailed payments by the big tobacco companies, these payments being only about half what they were last year.

Total income collections for ten months were reported as $5,376,308.23, as compared with $5,550,719.51 for the same period last year.

Inheritance tax collections for 1934 are badly off, amounting to only $333,978.46, as compared with $442,995.54 for the first ten months of 1933.

Franchise taxes, intended to recapture from corporations some of the ad valorem savings, are up some, the 1934 collections to date being $6,410,188.20, as compared with $6,042,203.41 for the same period last year.

There will be no salary cuts this fiscal year due to disappointing general fund revenue, as the General Assembly authorized the diversion of $1,000,000 from the highway fund in case that sum were available. The ten months' collections reveal that it will be more than available. The bulging highway fund also will bear the brunt of carrying general fund obligations due to the deficit.
