

Business Puts A Punch In Recovery

Leaders Keep Plans Secret

Understood That President's Four Billion Relief Request Is Frowned Upon

New York.—The war council of business and industry munched its course for putting the punch behind its program for economic recovery formed by the joint business conference recently in White Sulphur Springs.

Silence guarded details of the plans drafted at a session of the business conference committee headed by C. B. Ames, president of the Texas corporation.

Only on one point, it was believed, had the administration strayed from the path pointed out by the conference. That was on federal finance. The request by President Roosevelt for $4,000,000,000 for a work relief program was viewed in some quarters as a debt-increasing burden contrary to the best interests of business and industry.

As stated in the joint conference platform, "a reasonable program of emergency relief expenditures can be financed without debt increase in the fiscal year 1936 by confirming unemployment relief to an indispensable minimum."

The $4,000,000,000 request, therefore, was put in the light of not being to the liking of the business men because it increased the debt, and not because it was for relief.

On the relief topic, it appeared that the administration had substantially worked along the same lines as the joint conference. Spokesman denied that the conference had asked for a dole in place of work relief on a wide and unalterable basis.

Quoting from the declaration of the conference, "the creation of public works for the purpose of providing relief invites waste and definitely defers a balanced budget."

There again the idea was paramount, spokesmen said, that a balanced budget was essential.

As for unemployment insurance or reserves, the businessmen have said the President's program has not been well enough defined to indicate whether it will be along the lines suggested at the White Sulphur Springs conference.

Arguments by the government before the supreme court of the United States in defense of the private contracts are seen by some as a favorable indication that the administration intends to join with other world powers in dollar and exchange stabilization.

250,000 Attend Inauguration Of Penn. Governor

Washington.—Headed by Congressman R. L. Doughton of North Carolina, a large delegation from Congress attended the inaugural ceremonies of Governor George H. Earle, 3rd, January 15, at Harrisburg, Pa., Congress having adjourned for the day to permit members to witness the event.

Governor Earle is the first Democrat to hold this office in 40 years in the traditionally Republican stronghold, and the sixth Democrat to be elected Governor of that State in the past 100 years.

Mr. Doughton, along with Postmaster General Farley, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania, the Lieutenant Governor of that State and Mr. O'Connor, of New York, Chairman of the Committee on Rules, and a few others, occupied seats on the inaugural rostrum.

Over 250,000 witnessed the inaugural ceremonies of Governor Earle.

New Taxes Hit By President

President Roosevelt is opposed to any new or additional taxes for the fiscal year 1936, he said in delivering his budget message to Congress.

This was taken to indicate that the Administration will frown on the attempts to impose an additional income tax on District residents, as advocated by Senator William H. King, (Dem.), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Such a tax measure would constitute not only a new tax, but would take millions of dollars out of the pockets of District wage earners and business men, tax authorities have pointed out.

In the President's message, he stated he does not feel it advisable to propose any new or additional taxes at this time.

The budget, submitted to Congress with the message, contains the 1936 budget for the District of Columbia and makes no mention of the income tax.

It fixes the "lump sum" appropriation from the Federal Government toward the cost of local government at $5,700,000, the same figure as for this year.

The $5,700,000 given by the Federal Government this year constitutes only 13 per cent of the cost of municipal government, while under the law Congress is obligated to pay 40 per cent.

The 1936 budget sets estimated revenues and receipts for the District at $33,100,000 and expenditures of $41,800,000, leaving a deficit of $8,700,000.

This will be met by the Federal contribution of $5,700,000 and a decrease in the working balance of $3,000,000 to balance the budget.

Real estate, with an assessed value of $1,135,000,000, will carry the principal tax burden of the District, with a levy of $17,025,000 and an estimated revenue of $18,740,000, including payments of taxes in default.

Tangible property, assessed at $70,000,000 and paying a tax of $1.50 per $100, is expected to yield $1,050,000.

Intangible personal property, assessed at $430,000,000 and paying a rate of 50 cents per $100, is expected to net the District $2,050,000 as against a levy of $2,130,000.

Senator King had advocated that this intangible tax be repealed and the income tax substituted. Tax authorities differ with him in this, asserting it would be unfair to exempt this great sum from taxation.

Other sources of estimated income for the District are: Public utilities and banks, $1,675,000; licenses, $1,225,000; gasoline tax, $2,050,000; water rates, $1,420,000.

The budget hits at the total of uncollected taxes in the District and recommends that steps be taken to collect these delinquent taxes or to write them off the collector's books.

At the close of the fiscal year 1934, it is pointed out, the total of uncollected realty taxes was $4,639,000. While the major part of this sum was delinquent since 1929, some dates as far back as 1877.

Of the collection of delinquent taxes in 1934, none were prior to 1926 and there was only a "small and insignificant collection" on the years 1926-1930.

KEEP HUSBAND HAPPY WITH FRESH FOODS AND VARIETY

Charles E. Rochester, Who Gives Some Tips About "Keeping Your Man," and a Scene in His Silver Grill Where Each Week He Entertains Thousands of Visitors.

With the aid of fresh, wholesome foods and good recipes, the American housewife can go a long way toward keeping any husband happy. That is the declaration of Charles E. Rochester, general manager of one of New York City's leading hotels, the Lexington, where the kitchens and menus replete with fresh foods are well known to visitors from all parts of the world.

Mr. Rochester believes thoroughly in American cooking and American cooks. His chef is a woman, Miss Charlotte Fields, and most of her assistants are women cooks. He even allows no foreign words on the daily menus of his hotel.

"In the interests of the great American appetite," says Mr. Rochester, he insists upon absolute freshness and highest quality in all food used under his supervision. He has set the most rigid of tests for his receiving storerooms. Tomatoes are right out of the garden, the fish are caught only a few hours before, melons are at the peak of ripened flavor, coffee is dated, tea is the freshest tender leaf, baking potatoes from Idaho are so precious that each is wrapped in tissue. Fresh, tasty bread and rolls must always be on hand for every meal, in wide variety, as bread is still and probably always will be the staff of life.

The examination of food is none the less careful just because great quantities of foodstuffs from every land in the world must be checked: pink grapefruit from Texas, bacon from Ireland, goose liver from Alsace, artichokes and anchovies from Italy, caviar from the shores of the Black Sea, chutney from India, raisins from Syria, marmalade from England, black bread from Sweden.

Not only are all foodstuffs carefully selected in his kitchens, but all are prepared with the utmost care. The experience and training of his American women cooks is supplemented with constant research to develop new dishes and to find new and more delicious recipes for old favorites.

In spite of the fact that many of these recipes call for unusual ingredients and facilities, a large number of the dishes which are consistently popular with thousands of guests each day are comparatively simple, and can easily be prepared in any home. He is always ready to answer any housewife's letter requesting the recipe for a favorite dish, or to suggest some new way to prepare a simple American concoction which will give a new flavor to the home dinner. Every day interested visitors are escorted through his kitchens.

"Use foods as fresh as possible, and use variety in the menus," is Mr. Rochester's tip to the American housewife who would have "her man" look forward to the delight of another meal at home.

There are men and women in the Stallings Memorial Baptist church with burial in the Augusta church cemetery in Davie county. Three children and two brothers survive: Mrs. J. G. Yost and Mrs. W. H. Jacobs, of Salisbury, and P. E. Click of Mooresville. The brothers are J. N. Click of Mooresville and R. C. Click of Winston-Salem, anyway.

The Bible suggests forgetting the things that are behind, and some people in Salisbury will probably be able to forget their January 1 bills and R. C. Click of Winston-Salem, anyway.
