Will you explain something about the causes and symptoms of Neuritis.—Mrs. H. B.

Neuritis is a composite foreign word from the Latin "neure" and "itis". Neure means nerve and itis means pain. Thus these two latin words, unified, gives us the word "Neuritis." When translated into our American Language, it means nothing else than nerve pain.

The nerve trunks, known as the motor and sensory nervous system, furnished us with possible energy and feeling. The sensory system permits sensation to become a conscious fact, and the motor system permits motion and activity to the different parts and organs of our body.

In Neuritis the nerves of these two nerve trunks, or parts of them, have become inflamed. When only one nerve is affected, the ailment is called local or simple neuritis. When many nerves are involved, it is called general or multiple neuritis.

Local or simple neuritis may be due to cold, injury to a nerve, accidental or otherwise, such as blows, dislocation, subluxations "which is out of its natural place; prolonged pressure, or from undue exposure to cold. A man may go to sleep with his head pillowed upon his arm, which is supported upon the back of a chair and when he awakens he finds that his arm has been paralyzed from prolonged pressure upon the nerve. There are many ways in which such experiments are made, although such cases usually recover quickly.

General or multiple Neuritis arises from a great variety of causes, although its origin is essentially found in toxic conditions. When deposits of irritating waste materials accumulate around the nerve trunks, they will develop nerve inflammation, nerve pain, known as neuritis.

Even vexation, worry, cares and grief, may bring about a neurotic condition of the arms and shoulders. There is no limit to which these foreign waste materials, stored within our body, will not bring active irritation, and it makes no difference how many nerves are effected, the cause is the same.

In local neuritis the patient has pain, a burning, boring or stabbing sensation, tenderness over the nerve affected, numbness, tingling, some loss of feeling, loss of muscular power, trembling herpes, with a glossy skin.

In general neuritis the tingling, numbness and pain is combined with weakness which effects, usually, the lower extremities. The nerve trunks become tender to pressure and may enlarge. The muscles become soft, flabby, and in some cases, show decided wasting. The limbs are weak, and in later destructive symptoms, paralysis may ensue.

Both forms of neuritis may become chronic. Although some forms may even prove fatal, yet, there are encouraging features of this painful malady. If taken in proper time and treated the proper way, the pain will subside. Thus relieving one of neuritis.

YOUR REST. Get enough sleep. No single rule can be offered for all people, for some require more sleep than others. But everyone knows whether they are getting enough sleep or going on short rations of rest.

Sleep can be likened to the recharging of the battery in your car. If you do not get enough sleep, you are drawing on reserves. Those reserves are limited. Find out how much rest you require to awake naturally refreshed, and adopt a time of retiring that permits you to get the required amount.

blind to the best interest of our State if we make heavy tax increases on business without regard to similar businesses pay in competing states.

"I know the sales tax is unpopular but I am not willing to wreck the entire school system to get rid of it. The schools need more money, not less. And this State must raise money for the aged, also. The new Federal law gives us an opportunity we cannot neglect."

"I have no intention of electrocuting the man and having the grand jury come out with a decision a few minutes later," he said. "I shall seek legal advice on anything at issue in this case."

The warden explained that, if Wendel were indicted for the murder, it would require an order from a court or some other "competent authority" to delay the execution beyond the current week.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who has contended all along that Hauptmann alone was responsible for the kidnaping and death of the Lindbergh baby, said he would accept an invitation to appear before the grand jury.

"I shall be glad to give any help I can," he said.

Wilentz, who has opposed Hauptmann's every move to escape the electric chair, said he believed the jurors would finish their decisions Thursday.

Whether he would regard a reprieve from Governor Harold G. Hoffman, who has announced there would be none, as coming from a "competent authority" was a subject of speculation.

ises which I can't carry out. And for that reason I say that I do not believe it will be possible to do away with the sales tax altogether by the time the Legislature meets next January—unless we do one of four things.

Those four things are: 1—place the tax back on the land and home owners. 2—Make our taxes on business and industry, from the country store to the biggest factory, so oppressive as to cripple our business in its competition with business in other states. 3—Let the schools and other agencies of the government suffer because of continued inadequate support. 4.—Fail to provide for old age security in compliance with the new, social security legislation enacted by Congress.

"And as much as I am opposed to the sales tax, I am more opposed to doing those four things."

"Farmers and home owners have all the tax load they can bear. Our taxes in business and industry already is higher than the taxes in our neighboring states. We would be

Former Spencer Postmaster, Merchant Dies In Statesville Hospital

James D. Dorsett, 62, of Salisbury, formerly engaged in the mercantile and real estate business in Spencer and one-time postmaster at Spencer, died in a Statesville hospital Monday afternoon. He had suffered with diabetes for many years and recently entered a hospital.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist church here and burial took place Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock in Siler City, at Loves Creek church cemetery.

Mr. Dorsett was a prominent Rowan county citizen. He ran for Congress on the Republican ticket and served as postmaster at Spencer for a number of years. He was engaged in the mercantile business in Spencer for 34 years, but retired two years ago on account of failing health and removed to Salisbury.

Mr. Dorsett's wife, the former Miss Hester Liney of Taylorsville died at their home here a year ago. There were no children. Mr. Dorsett is survived by two brothers and a sister, J. R. Dorsett of Spencer, Rev. H. Grady Dorsett of Salisbury, with whom he lived, and Mrs. V. M. Dorsett of Siler City.

Government To Dispose of Huge Part of Cotton Holdings

Washington—Secretary Wallace said the Commodity Credit corporation is expected to make "a very constructive announcement" outlining government plans for sale of 4,500,000 bales of cotton held under 12 cent loans, Friday.

While the secretary refused to discuss the administration's plan for disposal of approximately 1,000,000 bales of cotton this season, Wallace did not deny reports which have been current for a month that the government intended to take a loss to permit the sale of some of this cotton.

Officials indicated several weeks ago that the Commodity Credit corporation probably would assume the carrying charges on this loan cotton which by this time amounts to about one and one-half cents per pound or about $7.50 a bale.

Fleeing Negro Seeks Haven In Police Car

Laurinburg—"Any port in a storm" used to be Clarence Elleby's policy. Now he is busy formulating another system.

When two automobile loads of police swooped down on a gang of negroes "shooting craps" in the city cemetery they took six prisoners, but Elleby, the seventh, took to his heels.

With Policeman Sherwood English in hot pursuit, dodging in and out among tomb stones, Elleby found that the tall cop was gaining even "if dey wuz ha'n't around."

Suddenly a car appeared in front, the door swung open and, inspired, Elleby dived inside.

About to appeal to the driver for more speed Elleby looked, gulped, uttered a hollow, if palitant, groan.

For he had only dived into another police car with just another grim policeman (not a ghost) staring at his "catch"—a sort of automatic arrest.
