Blue Masque Will Present Original Play "Fog". This does not refer to the weather of London, but to the subject of one of the plays of the Blue Masque's next major production, the tentative date of which is April 17. Everett Lynch, the author of this one act play, has chosen his cast for his winning manuscript. For quite a long time, the students of Catawba have wondered what impression the professors would give out of the class-rooms and on the stage. This is about to come to pass for together with the original one act play will be presented "The Monkey's Paw", a play in three scenes. Rehearsals are already under way for this presentation. Not only the fact that the staid professors of Catawba are taking part in a public performance will make this production worth seeing, but the theme of the play itself is magnetic. Only a sketchy outline of the theme can be presented, for to give a review of the play would spoil the suspense of the attending audience. In the play, the monkey's paw is a charm which has a spell cast upon it by a fakir. The fakir presents the charm to an Englishman, Sergeant Parker, and the possession of the charm gives him the power to receive three wishes. The play proceeds to disclose the havoc wrought by the selfish desires of this family. The main purpose of the play is disclosed in a speech of Sergeant Parker's—"Nobody can evade fate. What is going to happen will happen no matter what one does." Some members of the faculty taking part in "The Monkey's Paw" are Prof. Cleaver, Prof. Dearborn, Prof. Lane, Dr. Moyer, and Mrs. Omwake. This cast alone promises an entertaining presentation and the content of the play emphasizes the expectancy. A group of Yancey County farmers recently ordered 98 1-2 tons of limestone. New South Wales has had its best budget in seven years.
