Washington—While there has been additional Cabinet departments, he no change in the generally friendly belief here now is that the President attitude toward organized labor will make no changes in his Cabinet the part of the Administration and for some time to come.

Only one Cabinet position becomes vacant by law when a President's term ends. That is the Postmaster General, and Mr. Roosevelt promptly reappointed Mr. Farley to that post. Mr. Farley has stated publicly that he wants to get out of Government service if he can find a good job with a future in it in private business, but until such an opportunity turns up he will trail along with the President.

A permanent Secretary of War to replace Harry Woodring, whose appointment has been regarded as a temporary stop-gap, may be appointed shortly but unless some Cabinet officer dies or resigns no other changes are now expected.

Secretary Daniel C. Roper of the Department of Commerce, whom many regarded before election as being on the way out, is said to have lined up such powerful political backing among the Southern Senators that it would be impolitic for the President to ask for his resignation.

Talk of legislation affecting the Supreme Court is dying down. There is no probability either that the number of justices will be increased by statute, or that any law restricting the authority of the court will be enacted.

In case of a vacancy, which is not at all unlikely when the advanced age of most of the Supreme Court Justices is considered, it is thought likely that President Roosevelt will announce a policy of picking a judge from one of the union Federal courts. This would relieve him from any obligation to name Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, who most ardently desires a seat on the Supreme Bench.

REACTION AGAINST LEWIS
Mr. Lewis's ill-considered demand has had the effect of making the Department of Labor and all other Government agencies concerned with the Labor situation "lean backward" in the effort to show no favoritism and to avoid the appearance of paying off a political debt. It has also cooled Congressional ardor for some of the more advanced phases of organized Labor's program.

When Congress assembled there seemed to be a fair chance of the enactment of the much talked of thirty hour week law. Now that outlook seems very dim. And until the Supreme Court finally rules on the constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, on which arguments have lately been heard, there is hesitation on the part of the Government to invoke its provisions in the General Motors strike.

The electric power situation has come out into the open. Chairman Arthur Morgan of TVA forced the issue with a public statement of his position, which is, in brief, that there should be apooling of interests between TVA and the private power companies in its territory.

This attitude is bitterly opposed by David Lilienthal, Dr. Morgan's second in command, and by Senator George Norris, "Father of TVA." They want private power companies put out of business. Each side would like to have the President lined up with it, but he has so far resisted all efforts to force his hand for a commitment one way or the other.

PRESIDENT'S POWER COMMITTEE
The President will eventually decide as between the two divergent power policies but to gain time and test the strength of public opinion, behind each point of view, Mr. Roosevelt has appointed a power policy committee with Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department as its chairman.

The belief prevailing here is that the Ickes committee will report in favor of the Morgan policy of cooperation with private power interests wherever the Government engages in public works which result in power production, and that the President will accept that as the Administration's policy.
