

DAILY CAROLINA WATCHMAN.

VOL. 1 SALISBURY, N. C. MARCH 1964 NO. 255

ENCOURAGING

We have accounts of a handsome little brush which - Hampden and with the enemy's cavalry, in the town of Fayetteville - Howard and Hurdock are said to have killed two hundred of the enemy's men with only their own guard and to have killed several and captured several others. The rest were driven out of town. General Hampton killed two of the enemy with his own hands.

Every step Sherman and his army took was a step towards the defeat of the enemy. It was not that this raid was a grand one, but it was a step towards the defeat of the enemy. It was not that this raid was a grand one, but it was a step towards the defeat of the enemy.
