At present the pressing [and immediate interest connected with European affairs concenliates upon and around the movements of Garibaldi, the great Italian Filibuster, who recently sailed from Genoa with two thousand men and landed at, or near Marsala, on the West Coast of the Island of Sicily, his intention being to arouse and concentrate the elements of opposition to an outcast from Nova Scotin, was appointed Surveyor the Neapolitan Government, his small force being the of the Port : David A. Bokee was made Naval Officer ; nucleus, around which the revolted Sicilians are expected

This movement of Garabaldi can hardly have been made without the knowledge, consent, and approbation of the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of France, and is but another step in the direction of what has been so ardently proclaimed and advocated, to wit :- Italian unity and nationality under the rule of Victor Emanuel. said Victor Emanuel being virtually under the control of Louis Napoleon.

This is no doubt the true state of the case, but although Garibaldi is compelled to act under these auspices to promote the cause he has at heart, we may fairly doubt whether he reposes implicit confidence in the good faith of the French Emperor or the Italian King. He would perhaps have no indisposition to treat with England or any other power that could guarantee the nonintervention of Austria. Indeed, some of the French journals affect to believe that there is some design of placing Sicily under the protection of Great Britain. should its separation from the Kingdom of Naples be effected. They say that the efforts as well as the machinations of England point to a position for the Sicilians similar to that held by the Ionians, " protection " meaning government-supremacy.

But it is evident that if the movement in Sicily successful, it will extend to the continental possessions of the Neapolitan Monarchy, and the whole fabric of the Bourbon power in Italy be swept away. Will Austria remain quiet. Can she do so while witnessing movements that deprive her of all her allies at the South and increase the peril of her own remaining possessions in Italy, If Austria interferes, France will also do so, and ting' whenever I kem' round? Didn't I look straight we may then see the " beginning of the end."

Few can seriously be brought to believe that the short and inconclusive campaign of last year settled the difficulties or removed the threatening aspects of affairs in Italy and Germany, nor can the mere talk of friendship and alliance and commercial treaties between England and France mislead any person as to the real ticklish state of feeling existing in both countries in regard to the continued preservation of peace between them.

But to return to Sicily; situated as it is, at the toe of the Italian boot-the most southerly of the large is lands in the Mediterranean, fertile in soil, exceeding the State of Massachusetts in area and population by about fifty per cent., its importance to any great maratime power could hardly be overrated. To any other power it would be less valuable in a political point of view .-In the hands of Sardinia it would be virtually under the control of France, and facilitate the realization of the dream of French ambition, which is to make of the Mediterranean a "French Lake." It is, therefore, plain that English jealousy might be easily aroused.

The Pope, naturally enough, does not relish the cool appropriation of several of his Provinces by Victor Emanuel, and has not yet in any way given up the idea of the re-conquest of these provinces. Spain and Austria cannot see the head of their religion overwhelmed by the forces of Sardinia, and we may, therefore, look for their appearance on the scene, which will present the strange spectacle of a catholic monarch fighting to withhold from the Pope possessions which have belonged to the See of Rome before the family of Savoy had ever appeared on the south side of the Alps.

Upon the whole, there is every chance for a row some where or all around, and the biggest sort of a row at STRANGE.-The public meetings held in the State of South Carolina all seemed to approve the course of the delegates of that state in the Charleston Convention, all of whom withdrew, with two exceptions. Well, last Wednesday a new State Convention was called and met at Columbia and appointed delegates to the Richmond the 27th. Sugars were active. No. 12 selling at 8 a Convention, and strangely enough not a single member of the old delegation was re-appointed-not one; but Barnwell Rhett and other gentlemen of the extreme school of politicians were appointed in their stead. This shall be destroyed." resulted in a good deal of feeling. The test vote between the more moderate and the more extreme men was that between Mr. Rhett and Mr. Hayne, for the post of delegate at large. Mr. Rhett, ultra, having received 84 votes, and has the color peculiar to the tree. Just so it is with men. Mr. Hayne, moderate, 67 votes. Mr. Theo. D. Barker resigned his position as Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee. Mr. Gaillard, of Columbia, editor of the South Carolinian, one of the former delegates, withdrew his name. Dr. Wallace, a delegate, retired from the Convention.

The delegates from the State at large are Mr. Rhett, Mr. Garlington, Mr. Burt and Mr. Middleton. The delegates from our adjoining district, that represented good. You may not have made much progress, but even by General McQueen, are Wm. S. Mullins and J. A. Dargan.

Mr. Greeley's Letter. The following is said to be a correct copy of Mr. Greeley's letter to Mr. Seward, which is so much talked about just now:

NEW YORK, Nov. 5, 1854. To the Hon. William H. Seward: Sir, I desire to say to you that the firm of Seward, Weed & Greeley is of me? from this day dissolved, by the withdrawal of the junior member of the firm.

When I edited The Jeffersonian, at Albany, you and your friends acknowledged the effect of my labors in your cause, in elevating you to the office of Governor and United States Senator. For my labors in sustain-

When you were Governor of this State with great ratronage in your hands, no offer of any position to assist me was ever made. When General Harrison was tronage in this State, and I received no consideration at a perfect shower of arrows, and the Scottish spearsmen your hands. When General Taylor was elected President you also had the principal disposition of the federal patronage, and in connection with Mr. Weed, you made Hugh Maxwell Collector of this port, a man who was never entitled to the confidence of the Whig party.

Instead of rewarding men who had faithfully adhered to Henry Clay and to you, such men as Zebedee Ring, William V. Brady, Postmaster; William H. Leroy, Navy Agent : Hiram Fuller, Naval Storekeeper ; John Young Sub-Treasurer, and a man was selected for United States Marshal whom you know I cannot name.

And yet, while you knew I had lost every dollar I possessed in starting the Galway line of steam packets to benefit Ireland and yourself, no offer was made me of assistance or place.

Subsequently, it was understood by my friends that I should be the candidate of our party for Governor, and your consent was given; but, instead of supporting me, drove his spear clean through Lord Percy, so that he never your consent was given; but, instead of supporting me, you and your friends nominated that trimmer and little villian Raymond for Lieutenant Governor, who was of no advantage to our party, and a man whom to know is

In all the positions I have labored to place you, the emoluments and the honors have been divided between yourself and Weed.

I have now to say that any support you may bereafter receive from me will be because it is necessary for the party, but not from personal considerations.

HORACE GREELEY Mrs. Peacock's Philosophy. As I zez to Mr. Pencock, Mr. Pencock sez I, it taint so use makin' words over what can't be helped.-Married folks don't ought to find fault with each other for better or worse, and if they find its for worse, it don't make it better to go through the world growlin' and grumblin." For my part I think it's a great deal better to make the best of folks, instead of the worst on better to make the best of folks, instead of the worst on To fulfil this angry vow he went to battle against the Scottish King, and made the lives of six and thirty of his bravfeel kind o'encouraged and keep growin' better and better; but if you keep talkin' of the bad, why, they grow discouraged and think there aint a bit of use in tryin." 'a married me if you didn't want to, of course you needn't; you might have married Susan Slasher; she wanted you bad enough, mercy knows. I needn't have married you, of course I needn't. Wasn't young 'Squire Tim dead ahead, dreadful unconscious, jest as if nothin' ailed him? him jest to disappoint him, and make him take pisen, for was nt I in love with you, Mr. Peacock. Didn't I have lots of lovers? I, Screpty Ann Green of Greentown, and never looked at any of them, because I loved you, Mr. Peacock? But, sez I, suppose I had married Squire Tim, and you'd married Susan Slasher, Susan would'nt have had my faults, of course she would'nt but she'd 'a had her own. And, sez I, Mr. Peacock, you would'nt have liked her faults any better than you like she'd 'a put the work through faster than I do, like enough; but would she have given her life away to your know she hasn't, and my state for literature? you know she hasn't. But she's got a higher head, that rou know Mr. Peacock. She'd 'a taken her own way by storm, not quietly as I do, that you know Mr. Peacock. And there's 'Squire Tim, -1 'spect he's as many faults as you have, Mr. Peacock, if I only knew 'emyou're a dre'ful trial to me sometimes, Mr. Peacock coldin' around, but I love you better than a thousand Squire Tim's. Pity if I don't. And if you squint a little, I aint goin' to look at you till you squint worse, or till I see nothin' but squint; and you musn't stare at the wart on my chin till it covers my lace. That's what I say to Mr. Pencock, young ladies, and it's just as good for you to hear. Only when you get married, be sure you marry for love, and for nothin' else, and everything will come out right .- Springfield Republican.

WHO ARE YOUR COMPANIONS .- " He that walketh with wise men shall be wise, but a companion of fools

It is said to be a property of the tree-frog that it ac-mires the color of whatever it adheres to for a short Thus, when found on growing corn, it is commonly of a dark green. If found on the white oak, it Tell me whom you choose and prefer as companions, and I certainly can tell you who you are like. Do you love the society of the vulgar? Then you are already debased in your sentiments. Do you seek to be with the profane? In your heart you are like them. Are jesters and buffoons your choice friends? He who loves to laugh at folly is himself a fool. Do you love and seek the society of the wise and good? Is this your habit? Would you rather take the lowest seat among such than the highest among others? Then you have already learned to be a good beginning is not to be despised. Hold on your way, and seek to be the companion of all that fear God. So you shall be wise for yourself, and wise for eternity.

A Good Reason .- " Mother," said little Nezzie, one and Corn crops of Chatham and Moore. In some por-is a grim, more king way, and sent the Percy word to look for him also, at the merry hunting.

Land Percy came out of Bamboro' with a company of fif-teen hundred archers, and began the chase among the heau-tiful Cheriest bills, early on a Monday morning, is the gold-on automatities.

Just then, one of his squires called his attention to a sight which quickly changed his opinion of the Scottish chief.

Down below, in Texiotiale, along the burders of the Tweed, came a host of full two thousand men, armed with hows and spears, bills and brands. As soon as they came near to the hunters they cried out, "Leave off quartering the deer, and look to your hows; for never, since you were horn, have you had greater need of them than now."

The Douglass rose in front of his men, his white plumes dancing in the wind, and his branen armor flashing in the mid-day sun; and when he spoke his voice was like a trumpet, so clear and strong and threatening.

"Ho, there!" he cried, "what men, or whose men are you? And who gave you leave to hunt in Cheviot, in spite of me?" Just then, one of his squires called his attention to a sight

Then Lord Percy, with a black frown, and a voice like thooder, answered: "We will not tell thee what men, nor whose men we are, but we wall bunt here, in this chase, in spits of thee and all thy clan. We have killed the fattest harts to all these forests, and we intend to take them bome and make merry with them."

"By my troth!" answered the Donglas, "for that boasting speech, one or the other of us must die this day! But, ing you I only received ten dollars a week to support my wife, self and child.

When you were Governor of this State with great matched; so let our men stand aside while we two fight it

The Percy agreed to this; but neither his nor the Douglas' sist me was ever made. When General Harrison was men would consent to stand still while their Lords were elected President, you had full control of the federal pa-fighting. So the English archers bent their bows, and let fly harged upon them. Then the English and Scots both drew their swords, and fought face to face, and foot to foot. And so began one of the most terrible fights the sun ever looked Soon the Douglas and the Percy came together, and fought till the blood spirted through their armor, and sprin-kled all the ground around them in a thick, red rain. At last the Douglas cried, "Yield, Percy, and I will take thee to our Scottish king and thou shalt be nobly treated, and have thy ransom free; for thou art the bravest man that ever conquered in all my fighting!"

"No!" replied the proud Earl; "I have told thee before, and I tell thee again, I will never yield to any man living ; so Just then an arrow, sent by a strong English archer, came singing sharply through the air, and pierced deep into the broast of the Douglas. He gave one cry Fight on, my merry men, while you may; for all my days are over!" then straightened himself out and died.

Lord Percy took the dead man's hand, and said, "Wo me! to have saved thy life I would have parted with my lands; for in all the country there was not a braver or bet spoke more. Then an archer of Northumberland took aim at Sir Hugh, with an arrow tipped with a white awan's plume, and the next moment the knight fell from his saddle: and the plume on the arrow that struck in his breast was no onger white but red.

And so they went on till evening, and still the battle was not done. Then they fought by the moonlight until the of dew, and the fearful little stars glinted flown upon them through the moaning trees.

In the morning it was found that of lifteen hundred archers of England there were living but filty-three, and of two thousand spearmen of Scotland, but fifty live, and these were so weary and wounded that they gave up the fight. When it was told to the Scottish King James at Edinburgh, that the noble Douglas had been slain at Cheviot, he cried, "Alas, woe is me! for there is not, and never will be, such another captain in all Scotland. But when the word was carried to King Henry at London that Lord Percy had been killed at Cheviot, he said. " May God have mercy on his soul! I have a hundred captains in England as good as ever be was; nevertheless, I pledge my ife to avenge thy death, my gallant Percy !"

est knights, and many hundred gentlemen and soldiers, pay for the life of the Percy. Soon the Scots avenged themselves; then the English; till As I see to Mr. Peacock, Mr. Peacock sez I, you needn't blood shed and sorrow that came from that bunt in the Cheviot Hills; most often called "Chevy Chace." For century after century, the decendants of the men who fought there were at deadly strife; and few I fear were as noble foce as the great Douglas and Lord Percy. of course I needn't. Wasn't young 'Squire Tim dead | At last they forgot that the first cause of the quarrel was in love with me? Didn't he look jest as if he were meltains who were reconciled in death and they went on hating, and robbing and killing one another; fighting, all the while in the darkness of ignorance, and superstition, and fierce, and all from principle ?- I was'nt going to encourage wicked passions. But after awhile God sent a better day to England and Scotland-a day of knowledge and true religion; and by its light these men saw that they were brothers flung down their swords, and clasped hands, and were BURN OF ROMAN LONDON .- In digging the foundation of St. Martin's Church at Ludgate, in digging for Goldsmith's Hall, in digging for the new Royal Exchange, wherever the digging may be within Roman bounds, when it is deep enough discoveries are made. Under the Royal Exchange there was found what proved to be a gravel-pit which had mine. I know Susan is a cut-and-dash sort of a woman; she'd 'a put the work through faster than I do, like When the Excise office was pulled down, six years ago, be tween Bishopsgate street and Broad street, a saic pavemen t was discovered; Europa, in the middle of it children as I do, Mr. l'eacock? No, you know she had been sitting under the ground for at least 16 centuries up wouldn't. Has she got my elevated mind? No, you on her bull. In the same neighborhood, a drain sunk in ellar disclosed part of another pavement that may have be longed to snother room in the same villa. In preparing the site for the Hall of Commons in Thread-needle street more pavements were found of Roman planning, under media val fragments of the walls of the old hospital of St. Anthony.-Between the part of Thread needle street and Cornhill wherever the ground is tapped, remains of handsome old Roman suburban villas seem to he. From one hole made to this part of the town there was fished up a female head life size, of colored stones and glass. The handsomest of the tesselated pavements that have yet been found lay buried him feet under the flag stones before the Indian House in Leadenhall-street. The central part of it, representing Bacchus on the Panther, is preserved in the library of the East India House. A superb mosiac pave ment was discovered under Paterposter row, there was another dog in Crosby square, another in Fenchurch street (of which a whole peacock was uncovered;) another in Bartholowew lane, near the Bank. These were the Turkey arpets of the wealthy Roman; bundreds of them lie buries ender the earth and press of traffic on each side of London Bridge. Fragments of wall painting, important bronze stat-uettes of Apollo, Harpocrates, and so forth, toy goats and socks, waterspouts, vase handles and ornaments, lamps, hair pins, bracelets, bath scrapers, spindle and distaff of Roman housewives, the pens, the weights, and the steel yards of the man of business; interesting remains of pottery, on which the potter's marks have become, through the studies of anliquaries, in their own way as instructive as inscriptions upon coins, and coins which, as records, partake of the digni ty of written history, the earth under the feet of modern Londoners already has yielded up .- Dicken's All the Year

A Scotch Answer.

The Rev. Ralph Erskine, on a certain occasion, paid a visit to his venerable brother Ebenezer.

ANTISEPTIG AND AROMATIC TOOTH SOAP

T IS A REMARKABLE FACT that persons in the daily buse of Soap as a Dentrifice, have cleaner, whiter, and sounder teeth, than those who use other preparations. The only reason that can be given for this is, that Soap is the only article that will destroy the vitality of the Animalculæ that destroy the teeth of every individual. There are, how ever, two great objections to any Fancy Soap prepared for the skin; First—It is exceedingly unpleasant to the taste; Second it contains far too much Alkali, which causes the gums to become soft, spongy and tender, and gives them a pale livid appearance, instead of a healthy, ruddy color.— After a number of experiments, the proprietor feels confi-dent he is offering to the public an article which only requires to be known to be in general use. By adding a concentrated extract of choice Aromatic Roots and Barks, the Alkali is sufficiently neutralized, and a pleasant AROMATIC FLAVOR given in the place of the taste of Soap, at the same time retaining its virtues to de stroy the Animalculæ. It effectually removes Fætid Matter, or Tartar, and gives a brilliant white, smooth polish to the teeth, heals and hardens diseased and tender gums, purifies the breath, and leaves a pleasant AROMATIC FLAVOR in the mouth. It is in neat pertable boxes, containing sufficient to last twelve months, at the low price of TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
