used of all established government and authority g men; and even when carried to that excess when it more justly deserves the pame of obstructiveness, there h a certain air of respectability about it that commands reverence from the great body of mankind.

reverence from the great body of mankind.

We cannot doubt that there are thousands, yea, bundeds of thousands of the citimes of the South who are boossily influenced by this feeling of reverence for the very idea of conservatism, even when it is carried to that excess that some other and less respectable name would more accurately designate it.

It would be a mistaken and excessive conservatism that could hope or expect to stay the progress of events simply by shutting our eyes to such progress; and yet, such conservatism would not be without examplers and parallels in the history of the present contests of opinion throughout the country, and the South particularly. We cannot, by crying peace, make peace. We cannot, by ignoring disunion, prevent the action of sundry southern States, of whose secession no reasonable doubt can now exist. It is neither true conservatism nor true courage.

To R. E. Cowas, Esq.

Withinstree, I be save to say that I will be present to say that I will be present of an address you on Tunsday night, or any sight therefore of the statement were. I make the statement in consequence of the suscentanty in which may last note left you.

It is no part to my duty, and if went went we part of my duty, and my be regarded as presentantly in the last went we exist. It is neither true conservatism nor true courage to be blind to danger or insensible to it. It is both, to perceive and guard against impending, and, indeed, inevitable contingencies.

Now, the most incredulous can no longer fail to pergeive and acknowledge the imminency, pay the certainty, of secession on the part of some seven of the southern States, and that at no distant day. Take what side N. Carolina will, and she is so situated that she cannot remain neutral, she must be affected by what is passing around her. She is so affected now. She will be more moil if she would; it is due to her own dignity and to her own safety, to have a policy, and to be prepared to maintain it, both morally and physically. To promote unity of feeling among her own people, and in order to do so, assume such decided ground as will remove doubt and wavering. This, we take it, would be the true conservatism, and would certainly be preferable to that sort of conservatism that would meet a wholly changed poettion of affairs with a wholly unchanged course of action, or rather, we should say, of inaction.

"COMMITTEE ON FROERAL RELATIONS."-By a gentleman just from Raleigh, we learn that the report of the joint Committee on Federal Relations is expected to be made to-morrow, (Wednesday,) and that it is understood that the committee unanimously recommend the calling of a State Convention to take such action as the peculiar position of our federal relations may render necessary. The committee will concur generally with the recommendations of the Governor's Message.

PITT COUNTY. - We learn by a private letter from Greenville, Pitt County, N. C., that a new secession pole has been raised there. The pole is of native pine, brush at the top, and bearing the flag of Southern Confederacy, a white field with blue border, and in the centre a single star for North Carolina, overarched by a bow of fourteen smaller stars.

The break will not probably be repaired under several days yet.

Dr. Hunter is out in another letter to-day, which may be found interesting to the consumptive. Dear Sire: I regret that I am unable to comply with your flattering request. My time this week is not my own.

I have no desire in these times to be silent. Some call themselves Secession men, and some call themselves Union men; but I believe there is little difference of opinion between them. All agree that the South must obtain further laws—to insult Southern members—to turn the Walls of Con-gress into Abolition lecture rooms, and make them the depot of all those incendiary publications and speeches, which are scattered wherever they can be, inciting the slave to rebellion, and making the homes and firesides of the South insecure from violence and blood. The continuance of such a Congress can do the South no good. It must cease to ex-

There is nothing more despicable than stealing the reputation of a reliable article to impose upon a community an inferior and worthless one, and yet it is often done. Fifteen years ago Heimstreet & Co. introduced a Hair Restorstive, under the name of " Inimitable Hair Coloring." Its wonderful restorative properties made it immensely popular, and grey and bald heads were like to become a thing of the past, when the country was flooded with imitations, the use of which was not only useless but absolutely injurious. The original preparation is a scientific combination, made with oil and stimulating spirits, affording an agreeable hair wash, while all the imitations are made with water, making the hair harsh, dry and frizzy, requiring, after it dries, the use of oil or wash to make it look decemby. We would therefore advise our readers to buy nothing but the original Inimitable Hair Coloring or Restorative, which is reliable.

In many case Consumption sets in after childs and feners," and these occur almost with those inspected. Many of Consumption had not even been suspected. Many of those friends with whom we are in daily intercourse, and whom we regard as really healthy, are thus carrying about in their lungs the elements of their own described to assert the line language in the rights of their own described to a cause to a dissolution of the Union, and that we are not willing that North Carolina shall remain in the Union, only on condition that the Northern States equal rights and equal privileges in the Territories of the Union and shall seve observed the distortion of the first symptom, and indeed, it almost invariably marks the commence of the many case Consumption sets in after childs thanks and appreciation for the sympathy and noble efforts of our friends at the North, who have bravely maintained our rights agains of ague. In others we have a sense of Acut in the pain them of the hards and soles of the ket, or a fush on the cheek; cold fet and hands are also frequently observed.—

Many persons mistake the fever and chilliness which occur in the early stage of Consumption, for intermittent fever. As the disease progresses, perspendious occur, generally towards morning, and are often so profuse as to drench the sheets, and even the bed.

The stomach is not much disturbed in the early stages of Chronic Consumption. It is by no means uncomm for the appetite to continue unusually good until after Dearrhoes sets in, when it generally becomes capricious and poor. In temales, after fever occurs, the monthly sickness is almost always suppressed, and it is common for the Cough and Disease in the Lungs to be ascrided to this irregularity, while in reality it is only the result depending upon the debility of the constitution induced by the disease. After the fever and perspirations have become established, the wasting of the flesh and strength goes on so rapidly that the body may be truly said to consume away. The joints soon appear larger than natural, from the wasting of the fiesby parts, the chest becomes contracted, the features sharpened, and the eyes attain a peculiar wildness and brilliancy.

The matter expectorated changes with the progress of the disease. In the commencement the Cough is dry; but after a time a water y or slightly frothy secretion follows. As the disease approaches the second stage this gradually changes to a sticky, jelly like, or glucy substance, often dark in color, but more commonly inclining to a greenish, with now and then streaks of a yellow color.

When tubercles soften, the expectoration become still more yellow and pus-like. The matter expectorated from a cavity in the lungs is peculiar. It is of a whitish yellow color, with a rugged or wooly surface. The celebrated Professor Forbes used to describe this sputa, as looking "almost like little balls of cotton or wood." At times the matter expelled is very offensive, but more commonly it is without the least smell. Sometimes it has a sweetish at others a saltish taste.

Frequently the patient complains of pain and some times can place his hand over the very seat of his discase; but more frequently there is no pain beyond a sense of oppression or an occasional stitch in the side, and tive duty of the people everywhere to give free expression sense of oppression or an occasional stitch in the side, and of opinion, in order that our Representatives in our State it is by no means uncommon for the patient to point out and national councils may with certainty reflect the wishes as the seat of his disease, the most healthy part of his

In this form of Consumption, the patient is always getting better," and yet as steadily growing worsethat is, he appears to improve for a while, and then relapses into a worse condition than before, each succeeding attack leaving him more feeble than the preceding genius of our free institutions, and that every attempt to one. He spits pus for a time, has fever, night-sweats, coerce South Carolina or any other Southern seceding State loses appetite, fiesh and streng h, coughs incessantly, and should be resisted by every other Southern State at all cap scarcely sleep at night. Gradually the course can scarcely sleep at night. Gradually the cough abates. the expectoration becomes less, and nearly disappears. the lever and sweats vanish, and he imagines himsel rapidly getting well. He gains several pounds in weight, and his physician points to it as an evidence of improve ment from treatment, or from Cod Liver Oil. But soon to have a voice in electing a President to rule over the ment from treatment, or from Cod Liver Oil. But soon South, is a gross violation of the Constitution, an insult to all the old symptoms return; the hectic fever and nightsweats, the cough and expectoration of pus-increased frequency of the pulse, and loss of the newly recovered flesh and strength

Now, you would ask, why is this? The reason easily understood—Consumption is caused by tubercles -these are produced by Catarrh, or Sore Throat, or Bronchitis-by impure air, or dust, or irritation of some kind in the air-tubes of the lungs. This irritation is kept up for a long time before tubercles begin to form; but sooner or later, a fresh cold, or some greater irritation than usual, causes their rapid deposition. Soon the cold disappears, or the irritation is withdrawn, and tubercles cease to form. Those formed, however, remain and gradually develop themselves. After a few months the lungs are again exposed in some manner to irritation, when a further deposit of tubercles take place, and in another part of the lungs.

successive crops, as they were formed. When they have softened down into " matter," and are being expelled, the patient has fever and perspiration; his appetite becomes poor, and he loses flesh and strength. But as soon as the first crop is thrown off, all these symptoms vanish, and be continues to improve until the second crop is ready for expulsion, when he again relapses.-Now, at every softening of tubercles, a part of the lung is broken down into a cavity; hence, as the lungs become gradually destroyed, the body becomes gradually wasted-each attack leaving the poor invalid weaker than the one which preceded it. During these periodic improvements, nostrams, and villainous compounds of every description, obtain credit for effecting the change which takes place, while, in reality, they but interfere with the proper action of nature. The poor patient is by such means, being "cured from the day he becomes an invalid to the day he is laid in his grave. I am not now going to speak of treatment, but I cannot retrain from making one practical observation on the injudiciousness of the usual course recommended by most physicians. It is no unusual thing for intelligent men to advise the consumptive to "take good care of himself," to "exercise in the open air," to "live well, but to "take very little medicine!" Now, what does all this mean, but to advise that he shall wait for the tubercles to soften in the lungs, and thereby destroy him. instead of striving earnestly, determinedly, perseveringly, to prevent that change from taking place? Left to nature alone, death is the almost inevitable issue. The aim of the physician, then, should be to cause the absorption of the tubercles, in other words, to make the system up and throw them out by the bowels, the kidneys, or the skin. It is by absorption that scrofulous glands are removed-that swellings and tumors vanish-that dropsies disappear; and by making this the chief aim and object of my treatment, I am able through the instrumentality of inhalation, to effect the cure of Consumption, by causing the absorption and removal of the tubercles from the lung, thus preventing ulceration and destruction of their substance. Invalids are very liable to fall into the error of supposing that, because they have not all these symptoms therefore they cannot have Consumption. Now, it rarely happens that we find all, or even a majority of the symptoms described in any one case. This is a malady of infinite variety, and, alas, too frequently so silent and nnmarked in its progress, as to be far advanced before any positive symptom gives us warning of its presence. It is like an enemy in ambush ; we are often on the eve of destruction before becoming aware that we are in the least danger.

There runs a stream by no means alow. With earnestness and stendy flow. Of bungry men to CASSIDEY'S. But people see snother sight.
The dealers round look puzzled quite,
And lay awake at dead of night, In trying to solve the mystery. Behind their desks they look aghast,

As purchasers go sweeping past, The tide of trade is setting fast, To the patriotic CASSIDEY. But sure the case is plain indeed, So even he who runs can read. The people go with quickened speed, To buy their goods of CASSIDEY. His goods are freshest, and the best,

In all the land from East to West, And every one doth feel distressed That does not buy of CASSIDEY Then come dear friends, quick come to me. And in my store you there will see,

Delightful Joy and humble me, The inimitable CASSIDEY. 75 BOXES CHEESE.—English, Fineapple and State OEO. MYERS.
