

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT.

The St. Louis Republican thus dis- courses upon the inauguration of the "ir- repressible conflict" in the West.

On Tuesday last there was a riot in Toledo, Ohio, between the Irish and negro stevedores employed at the docks in loading and unloading the lake-boats. It seems that the Irish made a "strike" and were discharged, and the negroes engaged in their places, at the old prices. The Irish undertook to prevent the blacks from working, and for a time stones, clubs, knives and pistols flourished in a frightful manner, a great many of the participants receiving injuries and some bystanders being killed. Several houses belonging to negroes were demolished, and to quell the disturbance the citizens had to be called out to patrol the streets.

This is the beginning of an irrepressible conflict between the white and black race. Already large numbers of fugitive slaves are gathering in the cities, and should the abolition policy prevail, the free States will be overrun and infested with this class of population. The negroes thus let loose upon the community must either be supported in idleness and sloth by those among whom they come, or they must put themselves in competition with the white laborers and reduce the price of work, if they do not wholly monopolize the more common of the industrial pursuits. This will at once put an effectual check upon white immigration, and compel the poorer classes, at least, of Americans, Germans and Irish to take their option between absolute starvation and toiling side by side with an inferior and despised race, at wages much lower than they have hitherto commanded.

We know nothing of the merits of the quarrel between the Toledo stevedores and their employers. It may be that the demands of the former were unreasonable and extortionate. The circumstances show, however, that the employers placed as high an estimate upon the labor of the blacks as that of the Irish, for the former were hired at the same rate that had been paid the latter. Capital rarely makes any distinction of color in respect to investments, and unless deterred by such demonstrations as those witnessed in the Ohio city, employers will, as a general thing, take advantage of all competition among laborers.

White men who derive sustenance for themselves and families by the exercise of their physical strength in hard days' work—that large and indispensable class, we mean, who have acquired no skill to give them advantages others—will now have to look this question of negro competition squarely in the face. They see a pack of rabid politicians in the country, claiming to act upon the dictates of philanthropy and humanity, who are daily and hourly encouraging the slaves of the South to escape, well knowing that they must be harbored in the free States afterwards, in the absence of any other provision for them.

Large numbers of "contrabands," seduced by the flattering tales of those mischievous, are rapidly filling up the towns and cities already, all being in a destitute and nearly helpless condition. The support of these unfortunate, misguided creatures, must fall chiefly upon the working classes of the North, in one way or another. The burden will come upon them in the shape of reduced wages, by reason of the increase of the supply of laborers, in advanced prices for the necessities of life, growing out of the taxation that will be required to maintain such of the black paupers as will not work, or in some other manner that will make itself equally felt.

We are beginning to see some of the practical results and effects of the foolish, illogical and baneful "policy" of the Abolitionists and negro worshippers. The irrepressible conflict between the white and black races has commenced. It is one that will continue to be between opposing and enduring forces so long as the radicals attempt to throw four million "contrabands" upon the North and West as free and equal men, to overrun towns and cities. The question is, whether the free laborers are quite ready to exchange their peaceful and comfortable homes in the North for the hemp fields and rice and cotton plantations of the South, driven thither by the black proteges of the benevolent (?) Abolitionists.
