Now and Then.

When Mr. Bates, as Attorney General of Mr. Lincoln, delivered an opinion sustaining the constitutionality of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, the Black Republican partisans were loud in their paregyricks and unstinted in their tributes to his sagueity as a constitutional lawyer, and his profundity as a statesman.

Are they equally pleased with his recent opinion on the test oath, which contains among other expessions the subjoined :

"Test caths, odious, oppressive and cowardly always, are always the result of desperate parties who (as violent as timidity can make them) seize upon this method to weaken their adversaries, whom they are afraid to meet in fair and open controversy. It was of frequent occurrence during the French Revolution; and of its experience in that period the philosphic historian writes: This formality of an oath, so frequently employ-ed by parties, never could be considered as a guar-antee; it has never been anything but an annoyance of the conquerors, who have taken delight in forcing the conquered to perjure themselves."

The Council of Generals.

We learn from the Richmond Examiner, that the council of Generals recently held in Washington City, has finished the business for which it assembled. The report of their proceedings will be submitted to Congress in a day or two.

It is said they will make the following recom mendations in regard to the Senate army bill

They approve the number of men for which the bill provides and the proportion to be taken from each arm of the service. They also recommend that, in addition to the Major and Brigadier Gen-Generals now in the regular army, five Major Generals, ten Brigadiers, and a number of Adjutant Generals be appointed from the volunteer forces, these offices to cease with the death or resignation of the first incumbent. The only recommendation to a private claim bill. Amy Dandir's horse, Romannian of the first incumbent. The only recommendation of importance in regard to the militia bill is tion of importance in regard to the militia bill is that the commander of the army shall have power to order inspections. They also report in favor of taking the Superintendent of West Point from the army at large, instead of confining the appointment to the corps of engineers.

Admiral Semmes.

Semmes to the President.

Frank, fearless and able as is this letter in all it parts, it is the concluding paragraph which impresses us most deeply, and which will linger longest in the thoughts of most men. Bight bravely and worthily does the proud old Amiral, speaking as an American citizen to the Chief Magistrate of the American Republic say :

We live in times of high party excitement, when men, unfortunately, are but too prone to take counsel of their passions; but passions die, and men die with them, and after death comes history. In the future, Mr. President when America shall have a history, my record and that of the gallent Southern people will be apprented upon and lant Southern people will be engrafted upon and become a part of your history, the pages of which you are now acting; and the prayer of this petition is, that you will not permit the honor of the American names to be tarnished by a perfidy on those pages. In this paper I have stood strictly upon legal defenses; but should those barriers be beaten down, conscious of the rectitude of my conduct throughout a checkered and eventful career, when the commerce of half a world was at my mercy, and when the passions of men, North and South, were tossed into a whirlwind by the current events of the most bloody and terrific war hat the human race had ever seen, I shall hope to ustify and defend myself against any and all barges affecting the honor and reputation of a man and a soldier. Whatever else may be said of me, I have at least, brought no discredit upon the American name and character.

If the citizens of Wilmington want the town incorporated into a city, suggest a public meeting.

J. S. Sth Feb., '66.

The above has been sent to us, we presume, for blication. We certainly do not know whether the people, the real estate owners, and the princioal tax payers, desire the town to be incorporated into a city or not. We presume, however, that if the wharf.

Wilson's, Warket st., nes such is the desire, the Mayor will call a meeting of the citizens, whenever he is properly approached upon the subject. So far as this paper is concerned, it certainly has nothing to do with calling meeting of the kind. It is true, we have our as about the matter, which opinions we do not care to express just at this time, prefering other citizens should take the initiative.

But we would take occasion here to remark that it behooves the real estate owners and other taxpayers, to take this matter into sersous considera a, and not act hastily. The question to be solved is, whether the town will be benefitted by a city corporation, or remain as we are for the present,- with a mayor and Board of commissi ers, who have ample powers to enforce all needful lares and regulations for the government of the municounsel to the bar of the U. S. courts, without sub-scribing to the test oath, is not so good as it was some weeks ago. The Supreme Court delays its decision, which it is believed was adverse to the constitutionality of the law extending the test to this class of citizens. The court is probably unwilling to decide a question which is identified with politics, especially as there was some expec-tation that Congress would repeal the law in re-lation to counsel practicing in the federal courts. Opposition has arisen in the House, and it is now believed that Congress will not act upon the subbelieved that Congress will not act upon the sub-ject at all until the time shall arrive for the repeal of the test oath in application to members of that body.

There is no sign of any relaxation of the stringent policy of Congress in regard to the "seceded" States and their members elect. Not until the committee on reconstruction shall have completed their system for the future government of the lately revolted States, and witnessed its acceptance and practical application, will those States be rep-resented in Congress, and then no member will be admitted who cannot subscribe to the test oath. As ninety-nine out of a hundred of the Southern people south of the Potomac were more or less engaged in the rebellion, it is quite uncertain whether, during the present generation, those States can be represented at all—unless, indeed, a great change in the representation of the North-ern States in Congress shall take place. The many intelligent citizens of the South, who have visited Washington of late, have come to this conclusion.

The financial measures, which ought soon to en-gage the attention of Congress, would seem to call for the advise and assent of the Southern stapleproducing States, even if political measures do not. But, here and there is a rub. Secretary Harlan declared in his address the other day that "some of our wisest financial men" express fears of the admission of Southern members at this time. This fear is based upon the supposition that the Southern representatives, fifty-five in number, would control legislation on the subject of the would control legislation on the subject of the national debt, and take steps for its repudiation.

[A thing without probability or reason.] Of course, it is assumed by "our wisest financial men" that half of the Northern representatives of the Northern people are prepared for repudiation.—No confidence, therefore, seems to be placed in the unanimous declaration by the House, at the opening of the session, that the debbt should never be repudiated.

The constitutional amendment regulating repu

The constitutional amendment regulating rep resentation is before the Senate. The opening speech against it is made by Mr. Sumper. It is somewhat singular that an amendment to the organic law of the land is hurried through with less explanations or arguments by the chairman of the joint committee that reported it. Another remark might be made upon the course of the discussion in the House, to wit: that the speeches had only an incidental reference to the amendment, and no speech has been made which even pretends to ester upon the merits of the question.

Mr. Sunner takes the lead in the opposition to the amendment in the Senate, but his objections addressed on the 15th of January, by Admiral may be expected from the snug little conservative minority of the Senate, whose regular number of ten will not, it is hoped, be soon reduced. Mr. Sumner's objection to the amendment is country, though, as he says, they are taxed, di-rectly or indirectly for the support of the govern-ment. His argument is that this tyranny of taxation, without representation, is inconsistent with the constitutional guarantee of republican govern-ment for each State. So his proposed amendment to the amendment provides for universal negro

Whether the radical majorities of Congress will accept this improvement, as they all consider it, is to be seen. They must keep in repose some ammunition for future conflicts.

Some political uncertainties will soon be settled An issue is to be made between the President and Congress in a few days.

IT CURED HIM. -The following story is told of the Rev. Dr. Morse: At an association dinner a debate arose as to the use of the rod in bringing up children. The doctor took the affirmative, and the chief opponent was a young minister, whose reputation for veracity was not high. He main-tained that parents often do harm to their children by unjust punishment, from not knowing the facts of the case. 'Why,' said he, 'the only time my father whipped me was fortelling the truth.' 'Well,' retorted the Doctor, 'it cured you of it, didn't
