WILMINGTON, N. C.: TUESDAY, MAY 1, 1866,.

Shame, Where is Thy Blush !

After every storm, a filthy scum, stirred up from the foul and decayed sediments of the bottom, rests for awhile upon the surface. This is also true of great political agitations and revolutions, and has had apt illustration in the Southern States recently. In most of our States, however, this senm, by the weight of its own filth, is rapidly sinking to the bottom, as the political waters subside, and it is to be hoped, with the returning calm, it will entirely disappear.

In Tennessee and Virginia, however, the people are yet cursed by rulers who are a disgrace to the age in which we live. In the former, from the act of the Legislature, disfranchising all the citizens but the followers and worshipers of the moral and political abortion, who now chances to be Governor, we fear time must clapse before they can be freed from the evils which beset them. In the latter State, however, the people, who are libeled by the course of their present chief magistrate, will, as soon as it is permitted them to speak at the ballot box, place the seal of condemnation upon his conduct.

Since the close of the war, nothing has happened, which will so shock the moral sense of the civilized world as the recent conduct and remarks of Gov. Pierpoint, in reference to his refusal to permit Gen. Colston to deliver his lecture on Genral Stonewall Jackson in the Hall of the House of Delegates. We had supposed, during the great Revolution just ended, if there was one character who had acted his part in the terrible tragedy, and had passed from among us to render an account of his stewardship on earth, in whom all the elements were so blended as gave the world the assu rance of a man, it was Gen. T. J. Jackson. We had thought that the exalted reputation of the citizen, the exemplary character of the christian, and the brilliant exploits of the soldier, had rendered the character of Jackson worthy the admiration of every man who honored virtue, truth and manliness, and had made him not only wor thy the pride of Virginians, but a pride to the American name; nay, an honor to the human race. We venture the assertion that Gov. Pierpoint will remain for all time to come almost, if not a solitary exception, without distinction of the character of Jackson to admire. And with signal letter. the following extract from the report of the Richmond Ecaminer, of the opening of Gen. Colston's lecture, we propose to leave this worthy Governor alone in his uneviable glory

Ladies and Gestlemen:—I had hoped to-night to have addressed you in another place, but in a conversation which has been accurately reported in one of the morning papers, [the Examiner] the Governor of Virginia refused me the use of the Hall of the House of Delegates for any "such purpose as to deliver a culogy on the most honored and beloved son Virginia has produced in modern times.

[In order that the reader may better know the haracter of this "conversation" to which General Colston alludes, and the accuracy of which he testifies to, we reproduce it here, as printed in the Examiner of last Thursday. - ED. EXAMINER.

were received.

On entering the Governor's room, General Colston presented to him the letter of invitation be had received from many of our most prominent citizens, which was taken and read. As the Governor returned the letter, General Colston remarked pleasantly:

"Governor, I suppose now that the war is over, that every Virginian feels a pride in the fame and character of 'Stonewall' Jackson."

Pierpoint..." No six: I feel no pride in Jackson as a Virginian, and can see nothing in his character worthy of admiration."

dmiration."
After some further remarks, Pierpoint asked, contempountly, "What is there in the character of Jackson to dmire? He was a kind of crazy enthusiast, with a good leal of bigotry of Gromwell in him. That was all."

General Coiston.—"I merely called, sir, to ask you if I sould get the use of the hall for my lecture."

Pierpoint.—"No, sir?" (very emphatically). "I will not sud the Hall of the House of Delegates for any such pursues?"

And then he again asked, derisively, "What was there in the character of Jackson to admire?

General Colston,—"It is usely for us who differ so widely, sir, to discuss that subject. You must excuse me for doing so. Good morning." And the General department In closing his able and entertaining lecture,

Gen. Colston, himself a distinguished and worthy follower of the distinguished soldier, very truthfully remarks :

He was beloved by his soldiers, admired by his enemies and the world. Jackson's name was honored by all the world over, by friends and foes alike, and it was recorved for one who calls himself the Governor of Virginia to say that he felt no sort of pride in Jackson, and could see nothing for admiration in his character. But the soldiers who fought him did not think so; the soldiers of the Federal army always respected and appreciated him. The soldiers of both armies had not been unmindful of the generous spirit exhibited by both of their great leaders; it was only the demagogues, who kept out of the battle, that kept howling for blood and confiscation.

A committee of three ladies was appointed to superintend the distribution for each State-a list of whom will be published in a few days. In addition to the appropriations above, about $50,000 will remain as a reserved fund in the hands of the Executive Committee to increase the allotment to such States as may require it, and to meet special ernment several years before the war. But for cases. The result of the Fair has been so far developed as to make it certain that its aggregate proceeds will not be less than one hundred and sixty thousand dollars. The entire expenses will not exceed three thousand dollars.

Personal.

We had the pleasure of a visit yesterday from Cols. D. P. Holland and V. P. Goe, of Florida. Col. H. was the commander of a Florida Regiment during the war, and is now making a most enviable reputation for the zeal and ability displayed in the defence of Maj. Gee, now on trial in Raleigh. Col. Gee is a brother of Maj. Gee, and was Col. of the 59th Georgia Infantry.

We had imagined that old Æolus had reduced to subjection the winds that were so rampaut during the month of March, and had fastened them securely in their prison-house, his cave, but he must have been deceived by their quietness and apparent submission and allowed them to escape his bolts and bars. Certain it is they have been rushing madly by us one after another, for two or three days past, in a manner that indicated a resolve never to be " eaged " again. It is a pity the old jailor should have so relaxed his vigilance. The beauty of our * The Hall of the House of Delegates should have been offered to General Colston without solicitation, but, in default of that fitting courtesy, he approached the socialed "Governor" of Virginia to ask for it. The following brief dialogue will show how he and his application were received.

It is true, however, that a tew days calm and sunpearance and beneficent May will find them preparb. coadcloth coat; also of some shees. shine will restore things to their late healthy aped for her favors and smiles.

The winds are all blusterers now. Even the editors (I ask your pardon!) who, a few weeks back, kept the public excited or aroused by their strife of words, their keen trusts and dexterous pairing of blows if they have not concluded a truce, have relaxed their warfare into picket skirmishing, and our journals are marked by a comparatively calm discussion of the issues of the Would it could continue! Let us not be disturbed by bickerings at home, while receiving the peltings of radical wrath! Poverty and affliction should make us avoid all exhibition of private animosities. We should leave that for the return of prosperous days, if it to necessary at any time. Our people are straining every nerve to get the means to keep them aftoat 'till the crop of the coming Fall shall afford some relief. Everything depends on the success of the farmer, and the farmer happily seems alive to the responsi-bility upon him. The merchant who has fur-nished us with the necessaries of life, for a consideration, has long ago reached the bottom of our pockets, and he now doubts whether it be worth his while to replenish his half emptied shelves, while his anxious look often indicates that he has but little surplus funds to meet the demands of his Northern creditor and support his dependent family. The mechanic is in a little better condition, but he feels that he cannot count with certainty upon a paying job, when he shall have finished that which now occupies his attention. We are glad to see the State and General Gov-ernments have some work here to give a few of our honest painters and carpenters. The painter's brush has within a few days past worked considerable improvement in the appearance of the rooms in the Capitol. Each of the officers has, in turn, been compelled to vacate before that practical Board of Internal Improvements, and seek an asylum with a neighbor till his sauctum was retitted. The Executive rooms present quite a differ-ent appearance from what they did in the latter days of the war in North Carolina, when the ornamental was necessarily neglected. The Postoffice Department is creeting a temporary wooden building for a postoffice, on the corner where Lawrence's Hotel formerly stood, the site of the hotel having been purchased by the United States Govthe war a handsome brick postoffice, worthy the Capital of the State, would probably ere now have been crected. No pains of expense will be spared by the proprietor to render his paper acceptable to all classes of readers. He confidently refers to his long experience (of 32 yeears) in the past as a journalist, to secure for him the patronage of the people of his District.

He congratulates himself that he can select for the inanguration of his enterprise no better occasion than the present. At the the termination of a long and bloody truggle to which the principles of free government have been overridden and the Constitution trampled under foot in which all the angry passions of frail and erring human nature have been excited and exercised—the Angel of Peace is now about to unfold her wings over all sections of or common country, and once again to gather around her the goodness, the strength and the magnitude of the American Union. At such a time as this he can have no better landmarks by which, for the good of his country, to direct his course than the Union, the Constitution and the President of the United States, and he pledges himself to sustain, as far as he is able, the purity and the integrity of the one and the frances. He natiand the integrity of the one, and the firmness, the patri-otism and the statesmanship of the other.

To the people of Sunter District he confidently appeals for their sympathy and patronage.

Identified as he has ever been with them and their interest in the past, he asks to be allowed the same privilege in the future. He expects to build up for them a District paper, the course of which will be consistent, pru-dent and patriotic, and one which he hopes will not be wanting in its influence on the education and training of the rising generation.

The services of an able and talented editor bave been secured, who will devote his time and abilities to the en-tertainment and instruction of his patrons, and who will take pleasure in seconding the efforts of the undersigned, to render THE SUMTER NEWS worthy of the confidence and support of a discriminating public.
