THE DAILY JOURNAL.

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1866.

President on the subject, has given an opinion to the effect that the President cannot separate the districts for the collection of the tax on cotton from the districts for the assessment and collection of the tax on other products.

This was the point which the delegation of Southern cotton factors and planters presented in their memorials to the President a few days since. The Secretary of the Treasury has also denied the applications to have the bounderies of the collection districts changed, on the ground that it would take longer for the new appointees to qualify, select and instruct their assistants, &c., then it would for the present officers to appoint a sufficient number of assistants and deputies.

All inquiries as to why the payment of bounties does not commence, after the reanswered by a careful reading of the first paragraph of the rules and regulations prescribed for the presentation of claims, which is as follows: "All applications shall be filed within the period of six months from the first day of October, 1866, and, before any payments are made, shall be classified by regiments, battalions or other separate organizations; and no application filed after that period shall be settled until the former shall have been paid."

It appears that neither Judge Chase nor Judge Underwood made arrangements to hold court at Richmond to-day, in pursuance of the adjournment of the court in June last, for the trial of Mr. Davis. Judge Underwood is at his home in Alexandria, and the United States district attorney of Virginia is here. I learn by private dispatch from Richmond that none of the officers of the court, not even the United States marshal, made their appearance at the court-house in that city. Since writing the above, I learn that United States District Attorney Chandler appeared at the court-room and announced that the court would not convene at this time.

Gen. Lee's Household Effects at Arlington Under an order from the President the household effects left at the Arlington mansion by General Lee, or rather, the fragments that were remaining of them, were yesterday delivered to the party authorized by General Lee to receive them. It appears that nearly everything of any value had been stolen. Many valuable heirlooms, including some of the family portraits, had been purloined. The portraits were taken from the frames, packed in boxes, and stored in the upper loft of the mansion for safety in 1861. These boxes had been broken open and everything of real value taken away, and the letters and private papers of General Lee scattered over the loft. A lady friend of the family, with Mrs. Gray, the old and faithful household servant, were yesterday looking over the effects and gathering up the fragments worth preserving.

The furniture, including several bedsteads, a considerable number of common chairs, two or three sofas, several tables and book-cases, a sideboard, bureaus, and some half-dozen large ancient gilt picture frames, and a variety of other articles of the kind, were tumbled together, broken, bruised, and in a most vandalized condition, in the suite of rooms once used as parlors, on the lower floor, preparatory to being shipped away. The only articles re-maining there from Mount Vernon were three book-cases and a carved hall chair. The sofas which a year ago were in the parlor, and in a tolerable condition, had been broken and torn in a ruinous manner by curiosity hunters, the red velvet covering of one sofa having been in this way more than half taken off.

It would seem to have been only the performance of clear duty on the part of the authorities when they took possession of this property a portion of which was historical and of some consequence to the nation at large, to have provided for its careful preservation.

National Intelligencer. Scandal About the Emperor Napoleon.

The Paris correspondent of the New York World writes as follows: The French master is now very sick at St. Cloud, and his wife and "whelp," as the Fauburg St. Germain calls the Prince Imperial, are en route to Biarritz. The Empress has no element of a governness. She belongs to the Josephine and Horense type of women, gay dressers and sweet co-pettes, but there is not a drop of the blood of atherine de Medicis or Marie Therese about her. Catherine de medicas or alarie Therese about her. The Prince Imperial is as yet a doll figure, whom nobody has gauged. The Emperor himself worn down by the excesses of a life alternately imprisoned and absolute, must be nearly at the end of his reckoning, and even now they "whisper" unceasingly that he is drawing to the exit door.—His raign has been to you, who see it from withmiceasingly that he is drawing to the exit door.—
His reign has been to you, who see it from without, a stately, heartless one, bad in its beginning, but vindicated by brilliant achievements. To those who have looked upon it within, it is marked by worse than the elderly debasement of courts, partaking at times of the licentiousness of the stews.
The affair of Margot is not yet stale, so that I may tell it to you.

ell it to you. Margot is a common lorette, known at the balls of the Rue des Victoires. She way wheld by the Emperor in the Bois de Boulogne. He despatched after her, and discovered her residence. Visits were frequent of evenings, no pains being taken to appoint a more secladed rendezvous, and with appoint a more secluded rendezvous, and with these the Empress, though well apprised, made no interferdnce, her habit being to give all liberty to her supreme. One night word came to the household to despatch immediately for the ambaror, Rue —. He was found there in a state better ean a spasm and paralysis. They brought him home. Evelody was alarmed and Jonbert, his phastian, advised more abstemiousness. As for Margot, he Empless sent to her, persuasively asking that she be allowed to defray her expenses out of France, at least out of Paris. Margot same by replied, that she had as much right, Ac., and anoudin't be defrayed nor persuaded. Of course, it we not etiquette to broach the thing to the Emperor, nor his would be so retortupon one whose magnetism District Attorney, the Court was regularly quette to breach the thing to the Esperor, nor haw could be so retortupon one whose magnetism had been so irresistible. Therefore, Margot, who told the story freely, grew in great request, and an American gentleman, who danced with her a few weeks ago, states that her heart melted but a day and a week to the Imperial charms; that sha is still the same susceptible siren, and able to keep her voiture and driver.

The New Route to New York. The following important dispatch announces the approach to completion of a new route to New York, which is destined to become a most popular and dangerous rival of existing communications between the North and South:

FORTRESS MONROE, Sept. 28.—The steamer City of Norfolk, belonging to the new Air Line between Norfolk and New York, made her first trip yesterday, arriving at Norfolk at 6 o'cleck, P. M., from Anamessex, on the Eastern shore of Virginia, where it connects with the railrod for Philadelphia where it connects with the railrod for Philadelphia and New York. Passengers leaving Norfolk in the evening will arrive at New York the next morning. The City of Norfolk is a new steamer and was built at Wilmington, Del. It is proposed, as son as the line gets to working, to place on the route another steamer, so that passengers can leave Norfolk both in the morning and evening. The great benefit to the traveling public afforded by this line of steamers cannot be overstated.—Twelve or fourteen hours will be saved in traveling to New York from Norfolk, and about ten dollars will be saved in traveling expenses. The rates of fare established by the Old Bay Line of Steamers, from Norfolk to Baltimore, have been increased since the withdrawal of the Leary Line, and this will tend to divert a large portion of the travel from this old and well-known route.
