THE COTTON CROP.

The Cotton Crop of 1866...The Causes of its Failure_White Laborers Can Produce Cotton Its Profits to Families who will Raise Cotton by their own Labor_Emigration of all Classes Desired by the Southern People.

To the Editor of the New York Times: It is generally admitted now that the cot-ton crop of 1866 will fall below one million other States, is that it will not exceed seven hundred thausand bales.

Cotton planting was commenced this year under all the disadvantages of disorganized labor, dilapidated improvements on plantations, buildings in many cases destroyed, ations, buildings in many cases destroyed, fences gone, fields grown up with weeds and grass, neither stock nor farming utensils, provisions or forage on them-everything to be supplied; good fresh cotton seed difficult to obtain, and selling high, which caused large quantities of old seed to be thrown on the market that were unsound or had lost their vitality by age. The freedmen refused to contract till February and March; the consequences were that preparations for planting commenced very late; plowing was badly done, owing to the condition of the land, and the young, un broken mules, which were generally used A very large portion of the crop was planted on four furrows thrown together hasti winter months were unusually wet, but from the 1st of April till the 1st of June, it rained almost incessantly, making it impossible to use the plow or hoe to advantage on the fields that had been planted. A large portion of the crop was planted in May and June, from one to two months later than the usual time for planting. The early cotton on the 1st of June was smothered with grass and weeds, the plants stunted and unhealthy. The ground which had been plowed was packed and close, but a continued till the 20th of August. The cotton plant grows in a good season from eight to ten inches high by 1st of June ; from four to six feet high by 1st of August, with branches three feet long, all loaded with bolls, blossoms and squares or crop on it. In August the army worm made country, and stripped the cotton of its leaves. I will remark here, that in a good season when the cotton has been panted at the proper time, the well cultivated, with a luxnriant growth, the army or cotton worm does not reduce the crop more than one quarter. About the 20th of August, the rains commenced again, and continued almost till the 20th of September, and were very general throughout the South. The large number of bolls which had come to maturity were prevented from opening and Cotton hanging out of the bolls, or much of it, dropped on the ground and was lost, and that remaining sprouted the seed, thus giving the finishing blow to the planter's prospect. THE ADVANTAGE OF PLANTING NEXT YEAR. Owing to the disasters of this year few planters will clear expenses, and but few will be able to plant next year without the aid of borrowed capital. Many will be discouraged and will quit; and, altogether, the present prospect is, that less land will be planted than was this year. The consequence will be, labor will be cheaper and more abundant, plantations being in better repair and better condition for cultivation, with the freedmen generally on them, and stock inured to work, with farming implements ready for use, preparations for plant-ing can be commenced the first of January or sooner, and everything can be put in good order for making a full crop. Such a season as the past, planters of fifty years' experience never saw before, and it is not likely to be followed by another very soon. The freedmen have worked better this year than was expected, and it is to be hoped they will improve as they learn to appreciate their obligations as hired laborers. The price of cotton will be higher owing to the failure of this crop, and the world will attrib-ute our failure to the free labor and the army worm, and it will be as hard to convince it next year that we will make a large crop as it was this that we would make a small

one. WHITE LABOR CAN PRODUCE COTTON-ITS PRO FITS TO FAMILIES EMIGRATING TO THE COT-

After an experience of thirty years as a otton planter, and abundant opportunities for observing white labor cultivating cotton, I feel no hesitation in saying that white labor can produce cotton and enjoy good health, and can by a judicious course make it remunerative while undergoing acclimation.
