DEATH OF THE HISTORIAN ROLLIN.

THE KING OF SPAIN AND HIS CABINET.

RUMORED SURRENDER OF CARLISTS.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Night—Navigation and travel is much suspended by ice. Mrs. Motley, wife of J. Lothrop Motley, the American historian, is dead.

A special dispatch to the News says that the report published in the Carlist papers of the death of the Spanish statesman Espartero is without foundation.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Night—L. Rollin, the historian, is dead.

Alfonso has telegraphed to the Pope asking his blessing and promising that he will, like his ancestors, defend the rights of the Holy See.

King Alfonso's ministry is announced as follows: Castro, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Cardenas, Minister of Justice; Jovellar, Minister of War; Salaverra, Minister of Finance; Moles, Minister of Marine; Robledo, Minister of the Interior; Orovio, Minister of Commerce; Ayala, Minister of Colonies.

Alfonso did not pass through Paris but has gone to Spain direct. He will disembark either at Cadix or Valencia.

Gen. Martinez Comos has entered Valencia at the head of troops that were sent to oppose him when he pronounced for Alfonso.

The Carlist leaders Dorregaray, Alvarez and others have entered Catalonia.

Dispatches from Spain say that it is rumored that the Carlist General Dorregaray has laid down his arms, and that other prominent Carlists are about to give in their adhesion to King Alfonso.

The Spanish Ambassador at Paris has resigned.

Disturbances are apprehended at Barcelona.

LOUISIANA.

GEN. EMORY BEFORE THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

THE GRAND JURY FAIL TO FIND A TRUE BILL AGAINST WAR-MOETH.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—Night.—Gen. Emory testified before the Congressional investigating committee as follows: "Have been Commander here for three years; I was here before and during the election; all my troops were brought here before the election."

After giving in detail the disposition of the troops, as they existed on election day, Gen. Emory stated that they were so placed by order of superior military authority, based on a requisition from Attorney-General Williams. In the city was directed to arrange my men so as to preserve peace; there was no disturbance; could not say any troops were used on election day; have no knowledge of the White League; my impression is that peace was kept on election day only by the presence of the troops; there were several reviews before the election; they were not made to affect the public sentiment.

Much interest is manifested in the proceedings before the investigating committee. Their rooms are crowded during the examination of witnesses. The investigation progresses very smoothly. The committee will probably get through in two or three days. There being a large number of persons in the city from the interior to attend the meeting of the Legislature, all witnesses wanted, or rather, necessary, can be summoned at once. The Grand Jury yesterday failed to find a true bill of indictment against Warmoth.

HEADQUARTERS.

NEW YEARS IN WASHINGTON CITY.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE MILITARY VETERANS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Night.—The members of the Cabinet and hundreds of others opened their homes to visitors and dispensed hospitalities.

There was a slight fall of snow here this afternoon.

The usual reception took place at the Executive Mansion to day, foreign ministers, Cabinet officers, Judges of the Supreme Court, army and navy officers and many others paying their respects to the President. A large delegation of the Mexican war veterans, under the marshaling of ex-Gov. Herbert, of Louisiana, were received by the President in a cordial manner. He is decidedly in favor of having pensions granted to them. Ex-Gov. Herbert afterwards entertained his old comrades in arms at the Ebbitt House.

VIRGINIA.

THE RICHMOND ENQUIRER IN A NEW DEAL.

RICHMOND, Jan. 1.—Noon.—The Enquirer, published in this city, appeared to day in an elegant new dress, with the name of John H. Bryant, formerly of New York City, at its head as proprietor. Mr. Bryant has, for several years past, been actively and successfully engaged in business in Richmond. The Enquirer is under the editorial control of Mr. A. P. Bennett, formerly of New Orleans.

The weather to-day is cold and disagreeable, with rain, hail and light snow.

ELECTRICISMS.

There is an unknown steamer ashore 18 miles south of Cape Henry. Baker & Co., wreckers, send a wrecking steamer immediately from Norfolk. This steamer has since been ascertained to be the Sana Maria, from Galveston.

LITERARY.

Harper's is full of pictures, verses, and sketches of a holiday and Christmas flavor. Miss Woolson's "Ancient City" (San Augustine, Florida) is concluded, and the very sprightly company and the pleasant story through which she has woven her descriptions, grow sprightlier, wittier, and more pleasant to the end. "The First Century of the Republic" is a piece written to order, and written disgracefully. A more trumpy piece of patchwork penny-lining, we have not seen in many a day. "The Rape of the Gamp" is a nice story every way. "Ismailla" is a bit from Sir Samuel Baker's expedition to suppress the slave trade on the Upper Nile and will be found brimful of interest. There are some sketches of more or less merit, and the editor's departments are done in the usual fashion.

Scribner's opens with a screed out of Paul Marcey, Travels in South America. "Bazé Holmes" story, "My Tourmaline," scarcely appeals to much human interest. "The Canyons of the Colorado," with pencil and pen, will attract readers who desire to enter a strange and almost unknown world. A glimpse only is given. It will be years before the wonders of our new world will have lost its strangeness. Dr. Holland begins a novel in this number, and it opens with great promise. He calls it the "Story of Seven Oaks." "My Night in a Stage-coach" is a vivid sketch of Christmas traveling in the old times, and is touching and tender in its ending. The editors departments in this number are especially good.

A Confessed Murderer.

George Peters, the landlord of a hotel near Lebanon, Penn., has voluntarily confessed the commission of an unexplained murder by him sixteen years ago. At that time he had just been married, and between him and his wife's brother there was a bitter feeling. This brother-in-law came to his house on a visit, and against his wishes, Mrs. Peters insisted upon affording hospitable entertainment. She went to the barn to catch a fowl which she intended to cook for dinner. The husband angrily followed, and ordered her to go back to the house. She refused, and he struck her with a club, crushing her skull and killing her. She fell under a horse, and nobody but the guilty husband knew that the animal had not kicked her to death. He says that he was so stricken with remorse that he twice took ineffectual doses of poison. Eight years ago he resolved to confess, but lacked the courage. He has now surrounded himself to the sheriff, and there is no indication of insanity, his story is and believed.

In San Jose, a jury has decided that it is not a breach of the peace to call a man a "low-lived cur."

In London, the houses are numbered consecutively up one side of the street and down the other.

"Fanny" writes from Brooklyn to ask why it is that all the young men who have donned "new" overcoats this winter smell so of benzine.

The Marysville (Cal.) Appeal says its "hoodlum ordinance"—forbidding boys to be on the streets after 8 o'clock at night—works like a charm.

Skeptical persons didn't make much headway in the early days of New England. No one not a church member could hold office, or be even a corporal in the army.

Here is another watch, quite a match for Lafayette's. It was found in the street in Paris—an enormous gold watch, with this inscription: "This watch belonged to King Louis XVI, and was given by him to the Abbe Edgeworth in the vehicle on the way to the guillotine."

A fortune-teller in Fitchburg, Mass., staked her reputation to the prophecy that two pieces would be burned on the 9th of the month, and hundreds of people are superstitious enough to prepare for a hasty departure with their movable property.

In 1793 Philadelphia was terribly scourged with the yellow fever. The city had been free from it for thirty years, but now it assumed the shape of a fearful epidemic, and swept over the town with the celerity of a prairie fire, destroying everything it touched. It thus raged from July to November, averaging forty deaths daily, and aggregating some five thousand victims, a heavy proportion considering the population of Philadelphia at that time.

"I am come for my umbrella," said the lender of it, on a rainy day, to a friend. "Don't help that," said the borrower. "Don't you see that I am going out with it?" "Well, yes," replied the lender, astonished at such outrageous impudence; "yes, but—but—what am I to do?" "Do!" said the other, as he opened the umbrella and walked off, "do as I did—borrow one."

A libel suit in Lowell, Mass., involves the question of how much publicity is given, in the eyes of the law to matters written on a postal card and sent through the mail. The defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff on a postal card accusing him of forgery, and the defence is that, as the postal office clerks are enjoined to secrecy, there was no act of publication than if the matter had been sent in a sealed letter.
