Mr. N. S. Richardson's class pre-sented the Newbern Methodist Sun-day School with a $120 organ as a Christmas present. This sume class presented the School last year with a $40 library.

The Charlotte Southern Home says: Mr. Rarry L. Groner hung himself in South Point township, Gaston county, ou the 23d December, 1874. He had g ven evidences of insanity some time before. There was no reason for the suicide known to his most intimate friends. Mr. G. was a good citizen, and his sad fate has cast a gloom over a large section of the country.

The Statesville Landmark says: We learn that on Monday afternoon, near Fontainblean. Long's Mills, in Yadkin county, one Berry Hutchins shot and killed Alexander Mathia. There had proviously been a difficulty byween the parties about the possession of a still house, facts are officially received. A decree which terminated in the murder of has been issued for the restoration, to Mathia, as stated. We are not fur-nished with any particulars whatever. erty, not included in the redemption nished with any particulars whatever. erty, not included in the redemption Hutchins surrendered himself and is fund. The Raleigh Sentinel says: Last Saturday, inthis county, Joseph Good-in felled a tree and it fell on him and hurt him bally. His old mother was sent for and she started immediately for her son, riding behind one of the neighbors on horsebeat for her son, riding behind one of the neighbors on horseback. Just before reaching Leesville, the old lady com reaching Leesville, the old lady coal plained of feeling a little bidly, and atopped at Wiley Lynn's store to rest. She died in less than five minutes after OHIO CONDEMNS THE OUTRAGE getting in the store.

The Charlotte Observer says : On last Friday morning, as the son of a Mr. Dixon, living about six miles from Dallas, Gaston county, was preparing for the day's work, he met with a fatal accident. It seems that the young man had taken the mula out of the stable dignation sbout the Louisiana outrage. with the harness on, and started off to The indignant utterances of the orthe field, when the mule took fright ators were wildly applauded, and and threw him off. As he was falling, resolutions energetically denunciatory his feet b soame entangled, and when the mule was stopped, the young man was found to be dying. He lived about 24 hours.

The Raleigh Sentinel says: Mr. Badgett died in Hillsboro of scarlet fever. It is a fearful disease, and the one that risks it for a friend must have a faith in God passing the socalled fashionable religion of the pres-ent age. Ireanna Jackson is a colored woman who had nursed Mr. Badgett's children, and formed an attachment to the family When she heard of his illness she left her home in opposition of the subject postponed until toto the wishes of her family and stood by the bedside of the dying man for days and nights, faithfully and affectionately administering to his wants until the last. Ireanna has passed the meridian of life, but all her days has been a fast friend to the white people A Hillsboro correspondent hopes that when she dies a monument may be erected to her memory, with the simple epitaph, "She was a good The Kinston Gazette says: Kinston on boast of the champion walkist in the State, in the person of of John Sheppard, col. On a wager he at-tempted the feat of walking 8 miles in one hour and a quarter, and but for one hour and a quarter, and but for the several impediments would un-doubtedly have accomplished the feat. He walked six miles in 64 minutes, when it was seen that he would fail to make his time and he was stopped. The walking was done on our most public street when thronged with people; the aidewalk is very uneven, and during his walk he ran over a child and stopped to pick it up, stopped to pull off his shoes and had to leave the sidewalk to pass around a cart that was backed upon the payament. With all these impediments, had he continued, he would have fallen short only 10; minutes. He avers that he can accompish the feat and will shortly try it over, and under more favorable circumstances. The Oxford Children's Friend says: When Nathaniel Macon, the honest politician, was closing his earthly ca-reer, he sppointed his friend, Weldon N. Edwards, executor of his will, without requiring a bond, or any responsi-bility to court. He knew that Mr. Edwards was anhouest man and could be trusted in the management of other people's mon'y. Mr. Edwards lived a long time in Warren county, and no breath of suspicion ever soiled his character for pure integrity. His life was a model of honesty for all the children of our land. As some lofty mountain peak rises above its fellows and bathes its face in the golden sun-light, so the name of Weldon N. Edwards looms up on the horizon of history, and shines like a light-house to therein. point out the pathway of safety. One of the last acts of his life was to send the Orphan Asylum at Oxford, by the hands of his esteemed friend, Hon. A W. Venable, his check for fifty dollars. Yes, the beauty of his life was illustrated in being good.
