JAMES R. SAUNDERS, Wilmington, N. C.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA.

We make no apology in copying from the Raleigh News the following interesting information in regard to the State University.

We hope there are friends of the University, and friends of education as well, in this section of the State who are both able and willing to lend a helping hand to that institution at this particular time.

Contributions are now solicited under the following resolutions of the Board of Trustees, and the form of the condition was framed under the best legal advice:

Resolved, On motion of K. P. Battle, that a special committee be appointed, who shall be authorized to adopt such measures as they may deem advisable for raising contributions for the use of the University, on such conditions and limitations as may be agreed on by the donors.

Messrs. Kemp P. Battle, B. F. Moore, W. A. Graham, Paul O. Cameron and John Manning were appointed on this committee. On motion of John Manning, it was

Resolved, That Messrs. W. A. Graham, B. F. Moore and W. H. Battle be trustees of the funds to be raised by contributions for the maintenance of the University.

The undersigned agree to pay to William A. Graham, B. F. Moore and William H. Battle, as Trustees for the University of North Carolina, the several sums opposite their respective names, on condition that the same shall not be used in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, to pay any debt or liability of the University, contracted or incurred prior to the first day of April, 1875, but the whole of said monies, and all interest thereon which may from time to time accrue, shall be devoted solely to the revival and maintenance of said University.

The Committee to solicit contributions desire to get all donations possible pledged so that the Trustees at their meeting on the 15th of June can show the world that they are able to redeem all pledges in regard to salaries. It is contemplated soon to send an agent in the field to raise a permanent endowment. At present however contributions are asked for, payable annually for five years. Mr. Kemp P. Battle tells us that on this basis $5,000 was tendered voluntarily, and without moving out of his tracks the subscription was swelled to $8,000.

Most of these who have thus far subscribed have pledged $100 per annum for five years, making $500 each. Mr. Battle requests that all those disposed to aid the revival of the University will notify him at once that he may send them contribution papers for their signatures. He is sending out such papers to those who he knows will actively aid the work, in all cases requesting a report to be sent in by the 10th of June.

GENERAL SHERIDAN is to marry Miss Rucker in Chicago on the first Wednesday in June. There will be four bridesmaids, and four officers of the regular army will act as groomsmen. President and Mrs. Grant, General and Mrs. Sherman, and Secretary and Mrs. Bismarck will attend the wedding. President Grant will somehow manage to find the time for this purpose although not able to devote a day or two for attendance at the Charlotte Centennial, where forty thousand people met to celebrate one of the birthdays of American liberty.

The Texas population of the Crimea is reported to be seriously diminishing. The obligation of military service leads large numbers of male adults to take flight into Turkey, and the small-pox, moreover, is committing great ravages. No sooner is a child vaccinated by a surgeon than the parents rush out the lymph, lest the young mammalian should have any impure Christian blood in him.

CENTENNIAL NOTES. The correspondent of the Atlanta Herald, from whose letter we published a short extract yesterday in regard to the Cape Fear section, has other matters to relate of interest to our people. The initials "F. H. A." indicate him to be a former resident of our city. Mr. Alfred has lived long enough in this State to appreciate the worth of our people, and in his new home will not forget them.

We make the following additional extracts from his letter: Whatever the historic doubts that may be hereafter urged and discussed, it is absolutely certain that North Carolina will no longer be divided upon a question which has at times been mooted angrily between most worthy and reputable sons of the Old North State upon both sides of the question. The "annual skepticism" among native Carolinians whom Judge Kerr in his oration so neatly held up to the condemnation of his auditors (and to the manifest enjoyment of all of them) will be careful in urging their doubts hereafter as to North Carolina's claim to paramount prestige in the work of successful and therefore patriotic rebellion one hundred years ago. We of the present day, know something of her achievements in a later revolution which fools and knaves now call rebellion, but which history will yet adjudge to have been as grand an effort of patriotism as though it boasted the stamp of success.

Judge Kerr, alluding to the conviction of the North Carolina mind of the great historic wealth of the State in the possession of the Mecklenburg Declaration, summed up the argument in the statement that "North Carolina declines to go into court to prove her right to recover that which she already enjoys." That this sentiment may hereafter animate North Carolinians to something of that self-assertion which has long been needed among a people whose only missing title to high and enduring fame has been the self-assertion that has helped to make our Commonwealth illustrious, should be the aspiration of every heart that feels an interest in the historical vindication of the South.

"God bless old North Carolina," was the fervent exclamation of General Lee, when, in a critical moment of one of the severest struggles of the late war, North Carolina troops, at fearful sacrifice of blood, restored the doubtful fortunes of a decisive day, and gave another inscription to the tripartite banner. "God bless old North Carolina" in the pious work which it is to be hoped this Mecklenburg Centennial Celebration heralds on the part of her sons to give to North Carolina her just prominence in the annals of America's glory, is a sentiment whose fruition will help to place the whole South upon a high vantage ground whenever American history shall be truthfully written and impartially read.

Judge Kerr, the orator of the day, is that "John Kerr, of Caswell," who for thirty years has been famous in North Carolina. An old Whig of the best standing, he was once the candidate of his party for Governor of North Carolina, at a time when Whig ascendancy in the old North State had been already lost. A brilliant canvasser for Governor could add nothing to John Kerr's fame, for he was as famous in North Carolina as was Kenneth Rayner, as Henry A. Wise in Virginia, as Winter Davis in Maryland, or Dick Menifee in Kentucky. These were grand old days in Carolina politics when George E. Badger, Willie P. Mangum, George Davis, John Kerr, Hugh Waddell and Kenneth Rayner led the Whig hosts to the knightly tournament with the Democratic which Bedford Brown, Bragg, Ruffin and Saunders championed. And in those days John Kerr, of Caswell, was eminent, not only in Carolina, but as an eloquent, cultured and persuasive speaker in Congress. Some people thought that Judge Kerr had a "little too much Confederacy" in his address to make Democratic votes in New England, but there are few who listened to his glowing declaration, and observed his impressive presence, that will need to be reminded of Judge Kerr's Centennial oration.

Ex-Gov. Wm. A. Graham received a large share of attention during the Centennial exercises, as he appeared an eloquent epitome in name and character of the best phases of Carolina history, and as he will long survive in the historic portrait-gallery of North Carolina. Twice Governor of North Carolina, he was also Secretary of the Navy under Fillmore, United States Senator, Confederate States Senator, and candidate for Vice President of the Whig ticket with General Scott in 1852.

Remote from the conspicuous seats on the platform was Alfred M. Waddell, who, next December will begin his third term as a member of Congress from the Cape Fear District. Handsome, genial, gifted, his attitude on the platform was suggestive of the modesty that fitly adorns a knightly and chivalrous character, and a person that proclaims his high lineage. Col. Waddell is honored and beloved throughout North Carolina with the ardor to which he is entitled.

Of other noted Carolinians, Senator Merrimon was present, and ex-Gov. Vance was honored, especially during his fine address at night, with a very flattering attention.

Practice versus Theory. The theory of disease accepted by physicians is, that symptoms are merely sympathetic indications of its existence, and have in most instances little or nothing to do with fixing its locality. Their practice, however, is diametrically opposed to their theory, for they administer medicines which affect symptoms only. The remarkable cures of dyspepsia, sick headache, constipation, rheumatism, general debility, urinary and kidney troubles, and malarial fevers, wrought by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, could never have been accomplished by remedies which addressed themselves merely to the removal of any one of the manifold and complicated symptoms to which those maladies give rise. Acting as the Bitters do, directly upon the stomach and tributary organs, overcoming their irregularities and endowing them with renewed vigor, they control, as it were, the springs of vitality, purifying and giving them fresh impetus, and dispersing all those harassing symptoms which proceeded from their misdirection or contamination.
