THE New York Tribune discusses the question, Why has the business of insuring lives fallen off? The main reason is believed to be the general depression of nearly all mercantile and professional enterprises. Among the minor causes it is alleged that there is disappointment among people who have been deceived by the false promises and prespects held out by the eanvaseing agents. The disgust of men who have suffered their policies to lapse is said to have been communicatet to the general public. It is suggested that if people could withdraw gested that if people could withdraw from their agreements and close their policies as they do hank accounts, by checking out the balance due, they would be better satisfied.

But note of these piaces are excelling our own Mountain City, Ashevalle. In Rounebeck, Bremen, an engine has been nearly completed by Herr structed next year. All this besides Trossin which resolves the problem, which for nearly thirty years has engaged the attention of inventors, of the utilization of superheated steam in common engines. The answer to the problem has been found in the new application of a physical law, and the use of a peculiar lubricant. An engine working with superheated steam needs only half the ordinary amount of coal, the hollor and grate can be smaller by one-half, the supply of water by one-tail, and the sir pump and condenser third, and the sir pump and condenser taird, and the sir pump and condenser city in the South. Work on two of these roads is now being pushed forspace. The improvement has been ward, and it is hoped will be completed patented in England, Belgium, and other countries, and can easily be applied to engines of the existing type.

GOLD.

There has continued a steady appre ciation of gold since the day of election in Ohio, and if we mistake not gold is now higher than it has been since 1878. If the theory of the contractionists is to work out that which they promise, there is no accounting for the rise in gold which is now going on. Contraction is in progress, but gold gets higher. PURK lager beer, just received in ice from St. Louisdirect. The following is the re sult of the analysis made by W. C. Conrad Chambet of the United States Naval Labora tory, New York. CONCLUSION FROM THE ANALYSIS OF

THE QUALITY. The quality of this beer, as shown by our analysis, is superier by its pureness as no extrance as matter could be detected. The large am not of extract substance (mait being used in ctraordinary great quantities, which, having been roasted, gives the over that peculiar flavor of fresh bread) makes this hear a very neurishing and highly recommendable drink for medicinal purposes. Anoth r good quality of this beer is that it keeps in good condition under all electrometraces.
