the gravest if not most disastrons been very efficient in this campaign. There have been more Democratic papers doing good service than we have noticed before. The papers have done their doty taithfulls and well. In fact, say what you will, it is the journalists, out the voters and earry elections. It is by spreading the light that this is done. It is by giving day by day and week by week through out the year the facts and dgures and arguments that form opinion and decide the political complexion of a county or of a State. The ed Hors are working all the year round to build up party; to con serve public institutions and civil liberty; to advance the material, the State: to bring back the Gov popular Government to the gener ations yet unbonn. The public speakers go out for a month or two months and make speeches mainly in the very centres where the papers are most read and where work of this kind is least needed. They ought to go to the places where men are remote from business centres and have weekly mails or none. The speech es are soon over, the campingners then take a long rest, and the les ions they taught would soon fade from the memories of men and be forgotten but for the editors. They continue their labors month after mouth and the people are kept in formed of what is transpiring in the political world. The various principles are discussed, the argu-

burning through their labors. By assiduous effort: by writing reams of paper; by judicions eduing, in its true sense, the good work is carried on from year to year.
