

THE WILSON ADVANCE endeavors to be an honest, faithful and impartial chronicler of the news...

Entered in the Post Office at Wilson, N. C. Second class mail matter.

WILSON, N. C., December 12, 1889.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

In the death of Jefferson Davis has disappeared one of the landmarks of American History.

An ardent believer in the right of secession, he was one of the last to adopt it as a final resort against the spirit of the North...

It was with sorrow that he contemplated the disruption of the Union which he had been a gallant and distinguished soldier...

But having entered into the contest he was the last to yield. His tenacity of purpose and his determination to resist to the last...

Gradually he grew weaker and weaker, but never for an instant seemed to lose consciousness...

They saw him arrested and imprisoned on a charge of treason and confined in a dungeon that did not dare to bring him to trial...

Dr. Foy's Resignation. "Rev. Joseph H. Foy, D. D., announces his resignation as pastor of the Fourth Christian Church..."

The Details of the Scenes at the Death in New Orleans—Arrangements for the Obituaries—All the Southern States Represented at the Funeral Yesterday—A Resume of Mr. Davis' Eventful Career.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6.—Mr. Jefferson Davis died this morning at fifteen minutes before one o'clock...

From the beginning of his fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

At the beginning of the fatal illness Mr. Davis had insisted that his case was quite hopeless, though the dread of pain or the fear of death never appeared to take the slightest hold upon his spirits...

return of malaria.

After death the face of the deceased, though looking slightly emaciated, showed no trace of suffering, the face more nearly resembling that of a peaceful sleeper than of the dead.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Mayor Shakespeare was roused from his bed about 3 o'clock, and proceeded at once to the house where Mr. Davis' body lay, and there, in consultation with the family, drew up his proclamation...

The ADVANCE has no excuse to offer for publishing the entire editorial of the New York Sun on Mr. Davis' death. It is an admirable production and coming from such a source must be highly appreciated by the entire South.

The death of Jefferson Davis at the age of eighty-one is one of the most memorable events of a memorable year. A veteran in arms and statesmanship, he had lived a life that was a model for the public stage.

The question of the place of burial was also discussed. The Davis family burying ground is the Briarfield homestead, just below Vicksburg. Here Mr. Davis' elder brother, Joseph Davis, was buried, and here the ex-President's remains will ultimately lie.

The news of Mr. Davis' death was promptly telegraphed to all the leading cities of the South, and many messages of respect for the dead Confederate and sympathy with Mrs. Davis have been received.

From the moment of the congestive chill those gathered around his bedside, who had been watching and noting with painful interest every change of symptom for the past month, knew well that the dread message was even at the door.

After the brilliant ceremonies at Fayetteville week before last, the patriotic fires are still burning too brightly to let our people be behind in paying their tribute to the memory of the South's great champion.

appreciation of his exalted character and distinguished services.

After death the face of the deceased, though looking slightly emaciated, showed no trace of suffering, the face more nearly resembling that of a peaceful sleeper than of the dead.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Mayor Shakespeare was roused from his bed about 3 o'clock, and proceeded at once to the house where Mr. Davis' body lay, and there, in consultation with the family, drew up his proclamation...

The ADVANCE has no excuse to offer for publishing the entire editorial of the New York Sun on Mr. Davis' death. It is an admirable production and coming from such a source must be highly appreciated by the entire South.

The death of Jefferson Davis at the age of eighty-one is one of the most memorable events of a memorable year. A veteran in arms and statesmanship, he had lived a life that was a model for the public stage.

The question of the place of burial was also discussed. The Davis family burying ground is the Briarfield homestead, just below Vicksburg. Here Mr. Davis' elder brother, Joseph Davis, was buried, and here the ex-President's remains will ultimately lie.

The news of Mr. Davis' death was promptly telegraphed to all the leading cities of the South, and many messages of respect for the dead Confederate and sympathy with Mrs. Davis have been received.

From the moment of the congestive chill those gathered around his bedside, who had been watching and noting with painful interest every change of symptom for the past month, knew well that the dread message was even at the door.

After the brilliant ceremonies at Fayetteville week before last, the patriotic fires are still burning too brightly to let our people be behind in paying their tribute to the memory of the South's great champion.

self-exculpation or self-reproach.

After death the face of the deceased, though looking slightly emaciated, showed no trace of suffering, the face more nearly resembling that of a peaceful sleeper than of the dead.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Mayor Shakespeare was roused from his bed about 3 o'clock, and proceeded at once to the house where Mr. Davis' body lay, and there, in consultation with the family, drew up his proclamation...

The ADVANCE has no excuse to offer for publishing the entire editorial of the New York Sun on Mr. Davis' death. It is an admirable production and coming from such a source must be highly appreciated by the entire South.

The death of Jefferson Davis at the age of eighty-one is one of the most memorable events of a memorable year. A veteran in arms and statesmanship, he had lived a life that was a model for the public stage.

The question of the place of burial was also discussed. The Davis family burying ground is the Briarfield homestead, just below Vicksburg. Here Mr. Davis' elder brother, Joseph Davis, was buried, and here the ex-President's remains will ultimately lie.

The news of Mr. Davis' death was promptly telegraphed to all the leading cities of the South, and many messages of respect for the dead Confederate and sympathy with Mrs. Davis have been received.

From the moment of the congestive chill those gathered around his bedside, who had been watching and noting with painful interest every change of symptom for the past month, knew well that the dread message was even at the door.

After the brilliant ceremonies at Fayetteville week before last, the patriotic fires are still burning too brightly to let our people be behind in paying their tribute to the memory of the South's great champion.

advocates among Gen. Pierce's special friends in New England.

After death the face of the deceased, though looking slightly emaciated, showed no trace of suffering, the face more nearly resembling that of a peaceful sleeper than of the dead.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Mayor Shakespeare was roused from his bed about 3 o'clock, and proceeded at once to the house where Mr. Davis' body lay, and there, in consultation with the family, drew up his proclamation...

The ADVANCE has no excuse to offer for publishing the entire editorial of the New York Sun on Mr. Davis' death. It is an admirable production and coming from such a source must be highly appreciated by the entire South.

The death of Jefferson Davis at the age of eighty-one is one of the most memorable events of a memorable year. A veteran in arms and statesmanship, he had lived a life that was a model for the public stage.

The question of the place of burial was also discussed. The Davis family burying ground is the Briarfield homestead, just below Vicksburg. Here Mr. Davis' elder brother, Joseph Davis, was buried, and here the ex-President's remains will ultimately lie.

The news of Mr. Davis' death was promptly telegraphed to all the leading cities of the South, and many messages of respect for the dead Confederate and sympathy with Mrs. Davis have been received.

From the moment of the congestive chill those gathered around his bedside, who had been watching and noting with painful interest every change of symptom for the past month, knew well that the dread message was even at the door.

After the brilliant ceremonies at Fayetteville week before last, the patriotic fires are still burning too brightly to let our people be behind in paying their tribute to the memory of the South's great champion.

to the interesting question how the Confederate leader was arrayed.

After death the face of the deceased, though looking slightly emaciated, showed no trace of suffering, the face more nearly resembling that of a peaceful sleeper than of the dead.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Mayor Shakespeare was roused from his bed about 3 o'clock, and proceeded at once to the house where Mr. Davis' body lay, and there, in consultation with the family, drew up his proclamation...

The ADVANCE has no excuse to offer for publishing the entire editorial of the New York Sun on Mr. Davis' death. It is an admirable production and coming from such a source must be highly appreciated by the entire South.

The death of Jefferson Davis at the age of eighty-one is one of the most memorable events of a memorable year. A veteran in arms and statesmanship, he had lived a life that was a model for the public stage.

The question of the place of burial was also discussed. The Davis family burying ground is the Briarfield homestead, just below Vicksburg. Here Mr. Davis' elder brother, Joseph Davis, was buried, and here the ex-President's remains will ultimately lie.

The news of Mr. Davis' death was promptly telegraphed to all the leading cities of the South, and many messages of respect for the dead Confederate and sympathy with Mrs. Davis have been received.

From the moment of the congestive chill those gathered around his bedside, who had been watching and noting with painful interest every change of symptom for the past month, knew well that the dread message was even at the door.

After the brilliant ceremonies at Fayetteville week before last, the patriotic fires are still burning too brightly to let our people be behind in paying their tribute to the memory of the South's great champion.

1889 J. C. HADLEY 1889. Dry Goods, Hats, Boots, Shoes, Clothing Groceries, Furniture etc. A FULL NEW STOCK. EXTRAORDINARY LOW PRICES.

WILSON MARKET. Corrected Every Wednesday by JOHN C. HADLEY. Full Line Millinery and Ladies' Furnishing Store. Notice: Having qualified as administrator of the estate of W. H. Wells, deceased...

IN MEMORIAM. Died, on Friday, the 6th day of December, 1889, in the city of New Orleans, La. JEFFERSON DAVIS. Vis. Ex-President of the "Log Cause," the soldier and statesman, "The Grand Old Man of the South," born in Kentucky, June 19, 1805.

Don't Don't CROAK! CROAK! BUY FOR CASH AND SELL FOR CASH, AND CASH! Have one price to all and let that be the lowest, then you will find one of your dollars buying as much as two used to under the old plan.

Christmas Goods. The finest assortment of styles ever shown in Wilson, including Java, Maracato, Ligette, Gaskela and Rio of every description. Call for prices.