A Scheme That Failed. Grogshops have become so numerous all over town that many of their bosses are at their wits' ends to make both ends meet. Several have adopted unique methods to attract thirsty customers, and of two that started out on new lines one failed, owing to its owner's lack of capacity, and the other proved so successful that owners of neighboring dramshops are green with jealousy. The suc-cessful shop is in Park row but a short step from the bridge, and st no time, hight or day, Sunday or week day, is it not jammed with a rumsodden rabble. There one may buy more than a quart of beer for a nickle. Of course it is poor stuff, but the ragged, filthy horde of bums who congregate there care more for quantity than quality. It is served in glasses the like of which were never before seen in a drinking place in this or any other town. They look exactly like the small globes in which goldfish are often kept. Each will hold as much as three common glasses and as much as ten of the Coney Island kind.
