Postmaster General Bissell is credited with the announcement that no local business men need apply for postoffices under his administration. He objects to commissioning local business men a postmasters, for the reason that the actual duties are performed by irresponsible and often infice hours.-Wilmington Messenger.

This we consider a step in the right direction. If public office is to be "a public trust" then a man should give that office, to which he may be called, his entire attention. Un loubtedly one way of testifying a genuine affection is by helping a somewhat timid suitor. A member of the House of Commons was once very grateful for a graceful and witty bit of encouragement from the lady of his choice.
