Poisoned by Scrofula.

Is the sad story of many lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially common to any hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissue, and is a composed of foetal cells, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But here is a remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerful effect on the blood, expels all trace of the disease and gives to the vital fluid quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not take any substitute.

LEASES AND REPAIRS.

Peculiar Rules Laid Down for the Tenants of the Astors. Some of the rules by which the tenants of the Astors are bound are curious. For instance, says the New York Sun, although they will make almost any repairs that a tenant suggests before the lease is signed, even though the repairs may cost more than the rental, they will spend a cent on the property during the existence of the lease. A lady who rented a house in Forty-fifth street from the Astors was told that she could have any repairs or alterations she wished, but no chandeliers. She had the house decorated from top to bottom, and many expensive repairs made, and there was not a remonstrance, but she had to supply all the chandeliers, at a cost of six hundred dollars, herself. Of course, they remain her property, and she can take them away when she moves.

A curious incident is related by another tenant in Forty-fourth street. She leased a house at a rental of two thousand dollars for one year. When she came to renew the lease for another year she was informed that the rent would be only eighteen hundred dollars. She was told by somebody who pretended to know that the reduction was due to a deterioration in the rental of the property, and that the Astors did not want more than a certain interest on it. That, however, was not true, as was learned upon inquiry at the office of the Astor estates. The clerk there said that the reduction was due simply to the fact that during the first year they had charged a percentage for repairs and changes. As none was required the second year the percentage was taken off. Nevertheless, it remains the fact that the reduction was voluntary, and to the tenant unexpected.

COURTESY IN A HOST.

He Shined His Guests' Shoes When His Servants Refused. The indignation displayed by servants in America invariably forces itself on the attention of visitors from Europe.

A well-known official of the English Post office tells a curious story on this point, says the Boston Traveller. Some years ago he visited America on business and while staying at New York he was the guest of a prominent officer of the Western Union Telegraph company, a gentleman whose name is familiar to most Americans.

When the Englishman retired at night he placed his boots outside the bedroom door, where they were duly observed next morning by his host, who asked his wife to get one of the servants to take them in.

"Oh," replied the lady, "he must get them cleaned at the corner of the street, just as you do."

"No, my dear," remarked her husband, "I can't ask Mr. — to do that. Just offer one of the servants half a dollar to clean them."

THE GREAT DEBATE.

Much Talk Going On in Both the Senate and House.

STEWART ARRANGES THE PRESIDENT.

Silver Men More Hopful of Defeating the Unconditional Repeal Bill—A Proposition to Postpone Action Until Next December.

SEPTEMBER 26.—This was an interesting day in the senate. The surprise of the day was the speech of Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, announcing against unconditional repeal. While his was not a great speech by any means, the fact that the Pennsylvania senator should announce against unconditional repeal, created somewhat of a surprise. It is an evidence that unconditional repeal is not as strong in the senate as it was two weeks ago. Senator Cameron said that the silver law had never done any harm in Pennsylvania. Such a statement can be made with truth by every other man in the senate.

The senatorial incident of the day was Senator Stewart's speech on his resolution contending for the maintenance of the independence of the executive departments of the government. He criticised President Cleveland vigorously. His criticism bordered on the vicious.

The day in the senate was mainly taken up with Senator Stewart's attack on the president and a speech by Senator Morgan in his defense.

Mr. Dubois offered the following resolution, on which, he said, he would address the senate tomorrow: "Whereas, Several sovereign states are without the full representation in the senate which they are entitled to; and whereas, It is the duty of the senate to act as a legislative body, and to see that the representation in the senate is equal to that in the house; therefore, That the consideration of legislation relating to the federal election laws, the tariff and finance matters which materially affect the partially unrepresented states, be postponed until the senate has met on the 15th day of January, 1894, to enable the states of Washington, Montana and Wyoming to have the votes, influence and protection in the senate which are guaranteed to every sovereign state by the constitution of the United States."

The resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Pepper calling for information as to the anticipation of interest on public bonds since 1861 was laid before the senate, discussed briefly and then, on motion of Mr. Quay, laid on the table—yeas 27; nays 19.

SEPTEMBER 28.—The resolution offered by Mr. Dubois to postpone action on financial, tariff and federal election measures until next January, was taken up.

After Mr. Dubois's speech in support of the resolution, Mr. Morgan, made a strong argument against it. Mr. Chandler suggested its postponement. He made some allusion to the senators who had changed their votes on the resolution to admit the claimant from Montana; and Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, asked him to detail an officer to the senator from Kansas (Mr. Pepper).

Mr. Chandler disclaimed any intention of alluding specifically to any senator, but said that he had greater respect for the senator from Kansas, who had changed his vote and given reasons therefor, than he had for other senators who had changed their votes and had given no reasons. It was plain that the senator thus referred to was Messrs. Gorman and Voorhees.

Mr. Wolcott spoke of the "sudden and inexplicable changes" that the vote on the admission of the appointed senators had undergone. He said that the opponents of the bill had definite information that an arrangement had already been consummated between certain senators on the republican and the democratic sides of the chamber; and alluded to Messrs. Gorman and Goodrich as the two "steerers."

Mr. Gorman replied to Mr. Wolcott's insinuations. He went so far as to make a remark purporting that the Colorado senator had obtained his information as to "steering" by listening at committee room doors or receiving reports from eavesdroppers.

Mr. Wolcott, resenting the insinuation and denied its truth. Mr. Gorman said that Mr. Wolcott had misunderstood or misrepresented what he had said, and he repudiated the intimation which Messrs. Chandler and Wolcott made that himself and Mr. Voorhees had changed their votes on the Montana case with any reference to the repeal bill.

want circumstances," and would impose a superhuman burden on the department, and hoped Teller would strike them out.

Teller replied that he wanted to know what brought about these anticipated payments.

It seemed to be committed to a single gold standard. The resolution was not an attack on the present secretary of the treasury, but as the new administrative system is going to adopt a new financial system, the senate should know what was done heretofore to better understand what change is to take place. Voorhees withdrew his objection and the resolution was agreed to.

The sensation in the house this morning was that the lie was passed between two members.

A dispute arose between Fithian and Morse as to a certain conversation between Wharton Barker and many business firms of Philadelphia, asking for legislation to preserve and protect the integrity of silver as a money metal.

The repeal bill was taken up, and Mr. Harris addressed the senate, contending that the Sherman act had nothing to do with the business troubles. In his argument against the bill he declared that it meant, and in his opinion, was intended to mean, that there should be no more legal tender silver coinage. Now many of these very democrats are working and fighting against free coinage.

The remainder of the week in the senate will be devoted entirely to speech-making.

SEPTEMBER 27.—The election bill debate opened in the house today. There were two speeches. Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, opened for the democrats and Mr. Brisson, of Pennsylvania, for the republicans. Both speeches were regarded as good and well argued.

Mr. Martin introduced a bill to elect senators by the people.

Mr. Oates, of Alabama, submitted a resolution in the house, authorizing the secretary of war to detail an officer to act as military instructor at the Alabama University. Jerry Simpson objected and Oates promised to remember him for his unkindness.

The election law repeal bill was then taken up and Lacey, of Colorado, took the floor in opposition.

Mr. Cooper of Texas has introduced in the house a resolution providing for the submission of the question of free silver coinage to popular vote.

The house committee on banking and currency today continued its hearings upon the measures pending on its calendar. Representative McQuinn of South Carolina spoke in favor of his joint resolution providing for an issue of $25,000,000 of additional treasury notes with a preamble declaring that $25,000,000 of previous issues had been lost or destroyed and are to be charged off on the books of the treasury.
