A Bare Coin.

Truly some interesting claracters

One of the rarest coins of the United States 'mintage is the famous 1804 silver dollar, Only nine of them are known to be in existence: and their worth may be inferred from the fact that one of them was recently sold for twelve hundred dollars. The market value of the coin differs in different catalogues, but the fortunate owner of one of these rare pieces may be sure that his possession is worth at least eight hundred dollars. It is easy to say that the extreme rarity of the coin gives it its present fabulous value. It is only another instance of the law of supply and demand; the greatness of the demand arises from that kink in human nature that makes people want what in 1804. Their disappearance is umph. shadowed in mystery. The popularly accepted story is that they were shipped to Africa to pay the seamen of our fleet, then engaged in war on Tripoli. The glitter of the newly coined silver attracted the fancy of the natives who gathered them for ornaments as fast as they could induce the sailors to spend them. So the whole issue disappeared in the wilds of Africa.

This story reads suspiciously like a sailor's yarn. It is very improbable that the whole of the 1804 issue should have been sent to our American fleet. Granted this to have been the case, however, it is absurd to declare that every man on board the fleet, from admiral to cabin boy, should have spent every dollar of his pay at the little port of Tripoli. Jack tars are notorious spendthrifts, but surely some few of the nineteen thousand dollars would have found their way home. Moreover, there has been no trace found in Tripoli of ble, and a president is a man. and the chapel of the kings, in the cathedral at a single dollar of the many thous-We wondered that the writer just Lima Before committing it again to ands said to have been sunk there by our jolly sailors.

That is about as hir, Cievening suggested in his 'veto message. We don't know whether it is a good thing or not. There has been so much monkeying and jugglery about the silver matter lately that we have almost come to that point where belief ends and skepticism begins.

If it is a good measure, it will doubtless be shown in the discussion which will soon take place. If it is a bad measure that will also be shown.

At any rate, it seems to be an effort on the part of certain silver men to meet the President half way. We don't know how Mr. Cleveland will regard it, but it is quite evident that it is a kind of surrender to his views as presented in his veto message.
