law, we believe is right, but the method that was adopted in South Carolina may have been wrong. Dealing in liquor is either right or wrong. If it is right, then there should be no restraint whatever; but if it is wrong, then the restraint can scarcely be too binding.

If the State recognizes the sale of liquors as an evil, and if it must be sold, then seemingly the proper au thorities for handling an evil would be the law itself. We don't say that ing opposed to a coalition between the South Carolina way is the best way. On the contrary, we think that it was faulty, but the inherent right render for the Republicans to adopt to deal with evils rests in the State. Mr. Kerr, after narratng his conversation with Mrs. Vance, which she told of the Senator's ufferings and treatment in Florida, says that he went in to see the sick man whom he found in bed.

Senator Vance, after inquiring about some friends in North Carolina, asked about the political situation there, and in the course of the conversation that followed used the following inspiring words:

"The Democratic party is immortal. I have not recently arrived at this conclusion, but since I have been lying here on my back I have settled and it will doubtless bob up thought protoundly of many things, and among them this idea of my earlier manl:ood has become a steadfast conviction. THE ANTI-CIGARETTE LEAGUE.

What may, in course of time, become a very formidable movement, was started in an unostentatious way in a New York boy's grammar school several days ago. The pupils, under the inspiration of their principal, selves not to use cigarettes until they attain their majority, and to encourage their playmates to make a similar resolution.

Furthermore, every student that was caught taking foul means in the preparation of lessons, reciting lessons, or standing an exhave been an uncompromising opponent to cigarettes ever since.

In our opinion the cause of the tendency can be easily explained. Whenever a boy takes up the habit, he generally does so clandestinely, and when he is questioned about it, the fear of punishment induces him which he gives an interview with to tell a lie; and when the first lie is told the second is easy to follow.

In addition to that the poison that is the peculiar product of tobacco deadens the moral sensibilities, and the victim becomes the blind subject of the animal nature instead of following the guidance of the moral nature. That seems to be the explanation.

In the case of men, of course, they have not the same motive to falsify about it, and the tobacco principle has not the same effect upon matured manhood as it has upon the pliant and yielding nature of boyhood. Cured of Rheumatism by Therefore, men may take up the habit with impunity.
