THE ADVANCE,
Wilson, N. C.

THURSDAY, November 22, 1894.

Snow fell in Virginia and farther North last week. Cold weather prevailed in Richmond and other parts of Virginia for several days.

NORTH CAROLINIANS don't like the bond issue very much. After all, however, it may be necessary to issue them in order to keep up the credit of the nation.

TOM REED thinks the last election was a presidential boom for him. McKinley thinks that his own boom has been especially strengthened by it. Little Bennie Harrison, also, is not at all out of sorts by the result.

JAPAN has beaten China in every battle, and the Celestial empire lies almost helpless at the feet of Japan. Li Hung Chang is a great statesman, but he is no fighter. The Manchu dynasty had better go into the laundry business.

SILVER is a dead issue now, at least, for a time. The last election gave it a black eye. The people don't seem to be such sticklers after silver any more. Come to think about it, they would just about as soon have gold anyway, if you'll give them enough of it.

In a sparring match the other night Fitzsimmons, the pugilist who wants to fight Corbett, gave his opponent such a terrific blow on the chin that the base of the man's brain was bruised and he died the next day. Fitz was promptly arrested and put under a ten thousand dollar bond.

MUCH is being said now about the advisability of organizing a new party to take the place of the Democratic party. It is thought by some that the old party cannot recover from its late defeat. That is a mistake. The Waterloo has not come yet, and it is not thought to be immediately in the future.

Dr. McCosh, ex-president of Princeton College, died last Saturday and was buried Tuesday. Dr. McCosh was one of the great men of the times. He was a Scotchman by birth. He was one of the best thinkers of this generation. Many valuable works are the product of his pen.

LAST Thursday Brazil's new President, Dr. Moraes was installed in office. Dr. Moraes elected last May over Peixoto his predecessor. It was thought at one time that Peixoto would endeavor to have himself declared dictator, thus preventing the inauguration of Moraes, but peaceful counsel prevailed.

WHEN Congress meets one year from now, Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, will be elected speaker without opposition. There is but one man among all the Republicans in Congress that is even thought of in connection with the honor, and that is Reed. He is the great head of the party in Congress.

A CHURCH festival kissing—for-revenue case has resulted in a breach of promise suit at Freeport N. Y. The man paid for the kisses at the festival, and then proposed to the maiden and was accepted. He afterwards backed out and the girl instituted suit. He seems now likely to pay again for that bill of confectionery.

ON THE last Thursday in November the State returning board will meet in Raleigh to canvass the vote cast in the last election. There are some matters that will be decided then. Bernard's election as Solicitor in this district will not be conceded until that board declares it. A great many votes were cast irregularly for him and for that reason may be thrown out.

AS SOON as the Democrats get through picking themselves up from their late defeat, they will begin making preparation to win a great victory two years from now. There is no reason to suppose that one defeat can disintegrate the magnificent party that has won on so many fields. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that its career has barely begun, and that two years will make such a transformation that it will be invincible.

WHAT OF SILVER?

Now it is said that the last election has about settled the silver question. Hereafter, so it is stated, we need not look for any legislation in favor of the white metal.

In the campaign just past we did not regard the silver issue as clearly drawn between the parties. The tariff was the all absorbing topic, and the battle was fought mainly on that line. In this State however, an effort was made at the State convention to bring silver into the campaign, but the party management studiously avoided the matter afterwards. So we cannot see that the result is a decision against bimetalism.

Granting, however, that it was an expression by the people in favor of the gold standard, what does the future offer? It only offers what had already been foreshadowed by the Democratic administration. More than once President Cleveland has shown his hostility to the white metal. Clearly there was no bright future for silver during the present administration. It was a foregone conclusion that silver legislation had to be postponed until another President and another Congress could be elected.

Now that the Democrats have been turned down all over the country and the Republicans have been hoisted into their places, the matter is not changed at all. Democrats have not pretended to be favorable to silver, but really have not been; and the Republicans have been hostile to it. Of the two people this year seem to have preferred the open foe to the pretended friend.

It seems to us that the people have about made up their minds to submit to the irony of fate. They prefer the free coinage of silver, but their masters, who should be their slaves, prefer otherwise, and they have about concluded to yield up the sponge.

There is no chance for the free coinage of silver, seemingly, in this country; at least, for the present. That being so, it is well to be making calculations to that effect. If we have put masters over us to dictate for us in this matter, and are satisfied with their dictatorship, then we should be satisfied with their policy. The country cannot complain of their masters. Officers should not be masters. They should be servants; but, as a matter of fact they are not servants. They ignore the people and follow their own pleasure, but if the people are satisfied at it, who can blame them?

Inasmuch as the matter stands as it does, the silver question had better be relegated to the rear. We should be sorry to see the country come to the single gold standard, but we see no help for it. All seem disposed to accept the result as unfavorable to silver, and we can't gainsay it.

THE MANCHU DYNASTY.

It is not generally known that the ruler of China is very unpopular with the Chinese people. It is true, however, if we may trust reports, that the great body of Chinamen secretly wish for the downfall of the Manchu dynasty that has ruled China tyrannically so long.

The present sovereign of China is a descendant of a race of kings that came from Mongolia ages ago, and conquered China. Ever since that ancient time the native born Chinese have looked upon them as usurpers and tyrants. More than once the people have rebelled against them, but each time they have been subdued with great loss of life.

Now, the war with Japan is regarded by the masses generally as an excellent chance to get rid of that unpopular family of kings. Most of them secretly wish for the success of the Japanese for that reason. It is not a war of the nation against Japan, but only a comparatively small faction that is carrying on the strife. If Japan is victorious and succeeds in taking Peking, the fall of the dynasty will be consummated to the great joy of the masses.

Consequently, the recent proposition of the United States to arbitrate the difference between Japan and China, is not very acceptable to the masses of the Chinese people. They do not wish to lose such an excellent chance to get rid of their tyrants. The proposition, however, is very acceptable to the ruling class, because they see that Japan's success would mean their overthrow.

Japan is not likely to accept the overtures of the United States, because Japan has been wanting to punish the Manchu tyrants for a long time, and there could be no better time than now. So we may expect the war to go on until the ruling class in China shall yield up the sponge.

DAVID B. HILL is a dead factor in American politics. It took David B. a year to find that out. The greater part of the country found it out last fall when Hill's candidate for judge was beaten by a hundred thousand majority. Hill didn't find it out, though, until the 6th of November. That day was a revelation to him. He can now meditate upon the vanities of ambition.

TRAINING FOR LONGEVITY.

Almost every one has heard about the legend of the Wandering Jew. His being condemned to the endless task of living upon the earth from generation to generation is a story that the world knows by heart. His life is looked upon as a remarkably sad one. To be obliged to live from century to century, noting the death of loved ones, separations at death beds without any hope of reunions—all that is looked upon as sad in the life of the unhappy Jew.

Still every one wants to live as long as possible. It is a matter that is plainly seen, also, that the longer a person lives, the longer he wishes to live. It is a fact well authenticated that suicides never occur among very old persons. Who ever heard of a centenarian's committing suicide? Such a thing never occurs. All the suicides are found among persons comparatively young, persons who have grown tired of living before they have learned all the sweets of life.

Generally speaking, the desire to live long is a natural one. Every one wants to postpone to as late a date as possible the inevitable packing up for the other world. That day will finally come, but mankind, as a rule, are not disposed to contribute anything conscientiously to the hastening of that day. The desire to live long is a commendable one also. It is commendable in the aged and praiseworthy in the young. It is possible for one to become a centenarian. Centenarians are not like poets. They are made.

If a person's father or mother dies at forty, there is no just reason to suppose that his life is measured by the same span. Insurance companies pretend to think so. They judge the risk by the record of one's parentage. There is reason in their judgment. However, for the habits that contribute to the shortening of the father's life may have the same effect upon the son. While one does not, and cannot, inherit longevity, still the child learns habits from its parents that will have effect upon his life. It is, however, largely in one's own power to shorten or prolong his days.

William Kinnear has an able article on this subject in the November number of the North American Review. In it he gives some examples of remarkably long life with a review of the subjects' habits. From those records he gathers some qualities that contribute to longevity and gives them in detail. We quote from him:

"Qualities that lead to extreme length of years are a well made frame of average stature, spare rather than stout, good health, robust constitution, freedom from ailments, few or no doctor's bills, good digestion, good appetite with little need of animal food, no consumption of alcoholic beverages, and the habit of sleeping well and early rising."

There we have a code; and if a person has all of those qualities, there is no reason why he should not live to be a hundred or more. Every one knows that, but the trouble with most people is not in the knowing, but in the doing. Repinings and moanings, mingled with complaints of one's hardships in life, conduce to shortness of days. The future centenarian is the person who has a smile on his face or lurking in the corners of his mouth all the time. The sour hypochondriac may expect to fill an early grave.

It is very important then for people to endeavor to acquire these qualities. All want to live long, and here is a simple direction which any ordinary being can regard in one way or another. We can't guide nature, it is true, in shaping our forms, but we can observe the law of health in such a way as to be quite free from bodily ailments. We can control our appetites. We can keep from drinking alcoholic beverages.

Withal the plan is a very good one, and according to experts, the average life of human beings is capable of being very much lengthened by a strict observance of these laws. Instead of the average life being thirty-five, it should be four score, and science may yet produce that result.

BRAVE BIRDS.

So far as we have seen, the Wilson Advance rooster is the only Democratic bird that has had the temerity to crow over the election. That fowl didn't need much inspiration to start him off; he was crowing over a slight majority in Wilson county.—Monroe Journal.

These brave birds in this part of the State, and our esteemed brother of the Journal will find that out, if he will continue the laudable practice of reading the ADVANCE. We should like to add that in addition to the entire county ticket, we elected all the constables in the county except eight.

NOT POPULAR WITH THE LADIES.

About 75,000 women voted in the recent election in Colorado. Most of them voted against Gov. Waite. They were afraid he might take a notion some time to ride around in blood up to the bridge bit. That kind of bridle business isn't popular with the women.—Greenville Index.

CAPILLARY SCENERY.

If Governor Elias Carr should call a session of the present North Carolina Legislature, Democratic, for the purpose of electing a successor to the Hon. Thomas Jefferson Jarvis, Senator in Congress by appointment, he would rouse a horrible tempest among the Republicans and Populists, who are expecting to divide the two Senatorships between them in the next Legislature. Governor Carr might well be the man himself. He is able and honest, and from the aesthetic point of view he is sublime, his moustachios being regarded by travellers, foreign and domestic, as the noblest piece of capillary scenery in the world. In the Senate he would be sure to have a chastening influence on Peffer, and even the relentless Stewart might scale down his 16x1 whiskers.—N. Y. Sun.

It's a pity that New York can't have such a distinguished governor as our Carr. We'd all prefer seeing his noble moustachios in the Senate to some whiskers that are already there. Then may-be the New York Sun might be inclined to run down to Washington to get a peep at something that its editor seems to envy very much.

THREE CENTS COTTON.

In the meantime it is becoming apparent that the spinners will absorb a very much larger quantity of cotton than was expected in the early part of the season, as they are aware that they will be able to purchase cotton at prices which will not be reached again, unless, indeed, the planters of the South should be so foolish as to raise another crop of cotton of this size, which would reduce the price in New York to 3 cents per pound and practically place it on the basis in the South, where it would be unprofitable to pay for the picking of the cotton in the fields.

We clip the above from Messrs. Hubbard, Price, & Co's Weekly cotton statement of last week. There is one encouraging statement in it, and that is that the spinners are using more raw products than was at first supposed. But the discouraging part of it is that another such crop will make the price in New York three cents.

Anyone, however, can see that another nine million crop will bring down the price to three cents, and our farmers had better open their eyes to that fact.

GOING TO BE GOVERNOR.

Reuben F. Kolb, who was beaten for the governorship of Alabama by the Populist ticket last August, has issued a manifesto to the people of Alabama in which he claims there were frauds in the elections and that he was elected. He says he expects to be in Montgomery on the first of December to take the oath of office. We quote a few words from him:

"You, fellow-citizens, have twice elected me Governor of this State, and this time by the grace of God, and the help of the good people of Alabama, I will be Governor. Dec. 1st is the day fixed by the law for the inauguration of Governor. On that day I shall be in Montgomery for the purpose of taking the oath of office, and my seat as Governor. And I hereby call upon the good people in every part of the State to aid me all in their power in the proper and peaceful upholding of the law, and to set aside the powers of the traitors and usurpers in Alabama."

THERE are twenty-six contests that will come before the next Congress. There are two from this State, namely, Cheatham contests Woodard's seat in the Second and Martin contests Lockhart's in the sixth. Out of the twenty-six only one is a Democrat. The Republicans will have a fine old time counting in defeated candidates next winter.

It is the opinion of many that the farmers of North Carolina will have to quit the production of cotton, unless they can contrive means by which they can make it profitably at four cents a pound. There is no sort of use in men's following a losing game even if it furnishes employment. Farmers can find employment for all of their time without toiling over something that is unprofitable.

—Wilmington Review: The Star speaks this morning of an aged Democrat in Pennsylvania who voted first for Andrew Jackson and who has continued to vote the Democratic ticket ever since. There is a Democrat in Wilmington who cast his maiden vote for Andrew Jackson and who has voted the Democratic ticket ever since, always going to the polls, never missing an election and never scratching his ticket. He is the father of the editor of this paper and if we will live as long as he has lived we hope to show as good a record as his. He is now nearly 89 years old and voted at the last election.

The Slang that Saved Him.

"My dear," said the apprehensive wife, "I thought you said you were out of politics this election. Here's your name on the ticket."

"Er—um—you misunderstood me. I didn't say I was out of politics. I simply said that I wasn't in it."—Ex.

Tom Dixon Voted For Morton

New York, November 7.—Rev. Tom Dixon, of North Carolina, the distinguished young Baptist divine yesterday voted for Morton and Strong, though he has heretofore always supported the Democrats. In an interview he said:

My first idea of reform is the necessity of Morton's being governor of the State. My second idea is the carrying of every constitutional amendment, rapid transit and consolidation included, and the election of the ticket from top to bottom headed by Col. William L. Strong. A reform victory means that we will have a government in keeping with the better aspirations of the people. No reform laws could be passed in Albany for the relief of the city if the Democratic candidate is elected. I voted for Morton because he represents the possibility for reforming this city.

Preparing for the Emergency.

"No," said Florentinair, the poet, "I shall never give that editor again—never, never."

"What has he done?"

"He has been rudely sarcastic. I handed him a bundle of manuscript this morning, and he told the office boy to hunt up his overshoes."

"Overshoes?"

"Yes, he said he had a lot of slush to wade through."—Washington Star.

"Er man kin run inter debt," said Uncle Eben, "but when it comes to gitting out he's gatter crawl."—Washington Star.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass."

"It is with pleasure that I give you the details of my little Maud's sickness and her return to health by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She was taken down with Fever and a Bad Cough.

Following this sore came on her right side between the two lower ribs. In a short time another broke on the left side. She would take spells of sore mouth and when we had succeeded in overcoming this she would suffer with attacks of high fever and expel bloody looking corruption. Her head was affected and matter oozed from her ears. After each attack she became worse and all treatment failed to give her relief until we began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. After she had taken one-half bottle we could see that she was better. We continued until she had taken three bottles. Now she looks like
