Is it not time that the Bryan, Watson, Woodard Club of Wilson is organizing into something like a working body? When the Club was formed its purpose as stated was to work for Democracy in Wilson county. The delay up to this time was what it should have been because no ticket had been put out. But now the conditions are changed we know our men from the constable to the president and it is time that our organization formed for that purpose be launched. The only hope for victory is in an untiring, harmonious effort.

The Club should meet as soon as possible and arrange for some public speaking in Wilson. The people are anxious to hear the issues discussed and it is due them that they be discussed fully by those who are seeking to be their representatives.

THE Democrats of Wilson county are alive to the needs of winning the coming election. They know that on this issue depends a great deal and have gone to work determined to bring every force in play which in any way strengthens the chances of victory. The ticket nominated in the primary election on last Saturday was an expression of the wide awake sentiment. If the county had been searched a stronger set of candidates could not have been selected. There was opposition by good men for every office and this fact alone shows the character of the ticket. There were men among this opposition who would have made an excellent fight but the voice of the people has spoken in another direction.

To all we would say that the the time for internal opposition is over. The duty of every Democrat whether he has been defeated in the primary election or not is to lay aside personal aims whatever they might have been, and go into the fight determined to elect the ticket that the people have put cut.

THE Boston Industrial Record furnishes the information to southern mill owners and all others who contemplate embarking in the cotton mill enterprise in the Southern States that "the so-called syndicate of cotton machinery builders, located in Massachusetts, which has been supplying machinery to Southern mills and taking a large portion of the payments in the shares of the capital stock, had a meeting within a short time and came to an understanding that the members of it would no longer furnish machinery to Southern mills and take payment in stock, the same as they have done heretofore, but furnish machinery only for cash, or its equivalent."

This has a meaning not only for every man who is in any way connected with the cotton industry but with every laboring man as well. It should cause us to consider what manner of man we are voting for when we cast our votes on next November. It should cause us to consider carefully whether we are working for our own interests or whether we are doing the very thing that has given the Northern capitalists a power over us.

Practical judgement should teach us that it would be more profitable to raise and manufacture our own cotton at home than to raise it in one part of the country and then ship it thousands of miles in order to have it made into a useful form. Our northern friends have seen this and wishing to make paying investments have put money into Southern cotton mills. For the last decade these investments have increased immensely until now all the larger Southern towns have cotton mills. But what does the present step mean? It means that Northern capitalists are so determined that we shall have the gold standard that they are willing to saddle any intimidation upon us in order to gain their point. Take for example railroad officials, many of the leading roads have sent out circulars, stating that operators will lose their jobs unless they vote as directed. Shall we free men, have such insults heaped upon us? Shall we by our votes next November say that we want this rule continued? Any one who will consider for a moment the result will answer no. The time has come to decide this question. Cast your vote not for some one who can not appreciate your position but for some one who has been along the roads you are now traveling and when he comes into a rich heritage you will be remembered.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER.

In this day of progress one must seek some one line in order to succeed. One must give special attention to some one line of work. Whether it be with man or not the conditions are the same. There must be some aim, some purpose towards which all energies must be directed. When this is not case much valuable energy which might be used to a great advantage is rendered useless. The receipt for success is a strict adherence to some one line of work.

The same rule applies to weekly news papers. The conditions are such that news can be gotten over the wires immediately after it happens. Such news finds its way to all the large daily papers. Many subscribers to every weekly paper either takes or has access to all of the dailies. For such men a weekly paper has nothing new for them unless it contains more than a rehearsal of the week's political and other happenings. But there are those who have not these dailies and are not in reach of one, for this class of readers a certain amount of the political news must be rehearsed.

It is our aim to make our paper contain something that will interest all classes of readers. So we intend to divide it into departments to meet the requirements of these classes. From this issue we will have regularly an education column, devoted to items which will be of interest to everyone interested in education work. In this column we will print any question, idea or information of any kind which the teachers of the county may suggest. Mr. George Connor will contribute, and being the head of Wilson's Schools, his ideas should be of interest to everyone in the county.

Other departments will be arranged as soon as possible. Send in any ideas you may have, they will be used and appreciated.

$100 Reward, $100.

Ian Maclaren's New Story.

Ian Maclaren's new short story, the last he will write until after his American visit, has been secured by The Ladies' Home Journal, for publication in the October and November issues. It is called "The Minister of St. Bede's," and is said to be in the brightest and cleverest Maclarenesque vein. Besides its charm as a delightful romance, the story is said to be notable for the admirable character that the author has created for the chief personage—the minister of St. Bede's as the loyal lover of an humble Scotch lassie.

Farmers as Financiers.

The farmer has been greatly flattered, by the poets from Virgil down, and by the politicians in our day, to an extent that can hardly fail to have turned his head. Owing to their numbers, what the farmers think about a public question is of vital importance to the politician. But the farmer receives no knowledge by revelation, and rarely makes an effort to acquire information beyond his own pursuit by study. The farmer is seldom familiar with monetary and commercial facts beyond the discomfort of paying his note at the bank, and the comparison of his own small profits with the wealth of financiers in the great cities, and with the considerable fortunes made by dealers in the very articles which he produces at great labor and small returns, inclines him to feel that he is the victim of commercial men or methods. His occupation does not train him to reason closely and to distinguish nicely between words, yet so many words used in connection with monetary matters have a double significance, one general and one technical, that one is more apt to think wrong here than anywhere else, and this probably is the explanation of the great number of educated men who are entirely at sea when money is under discussion.—Fred. Perry Powers, in September Lippincott's.
