

THE ROANOKE NEWS.

HALL & SLEDGE, PROPRIETORS.

A NEWSPAPER FOR THE PEOPLE.

TERMS—$2.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

VOL. XIII.

WELDON, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1884.

NO. 6.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. H. KITCHIN, W. A. DENN,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
SCOTLAND NECK, N. C.

BRANCH & BELL,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
ENFIELD, N. C.

F. H. HUBBELL, R. H. SMITH, JR.,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
SCOTLAND NECK, N. C.

W. H. HUBBELL, R. H. SMITH, JR.,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
SCOTLAND NECK, N. C.

CRIZZARD & WYMAN,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
HALIFAX, N. C.

THOMAS H. HILL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
HALIFAX, N. C.

T. W. MAXON,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
GARYSBURG, N. C.

WALTER E. DANIEL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
WELDON, N. C.

W. H. HALL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
WELDON, N. C.

MULLEN & MOORE,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
HALIFAX, N. C.

D. J. E. SHELDON,
SURGEON DENTIST,
WELDON, N. C.

NIGHT THOUGHTS.

Sad and calm, so beautiful the night,
The morning had had passed;
To my mind recalled with excess of light
The moon had risen at last.

Far overhead, in the deep vault of heaven,
Stared great Orion, and the Sisters Seven,
The great Orion, and the Sisters Seven,
With all their bright array.

And as I watched the glorious firmament,
Behold a bright star fell,
Scarcely it fell, with slow descent,
And all my mind farewell.

Say, had thou felt the sphere appointed thee,
Flashing thy light and falling thee
Before thou hadst won the goal?

Or hadst thou taken but a lower room
In which to work and pray,
Those that have gone astray?

With trembling hope and passionate desire
The eager spirituous soul,
Unconscious that thou art still alive,
Thou shalt this life shall close.

Striving to penetrate the mystery,
Any human sense reveal,
Thou shalt, the great reward, passing by,
Finally withdraw the veil.

TO YOUNG GIRLS.

You have heard of Punch's favorite advice—
"To those about to marry—don't."
Well, I do not quite agree with Punch. I say, if you are old enough and have had sufficient experience to know what you are about, go ahead and marry as soon as possible. But young girls just released from boarding schools are not fit to marry. How should they be? What do they know of the trials and disappointments, the burdens and responsibilities of life? They are no more fit to be a man's companion, helpmate and confidante, than a china doll. I believe one-half of the domestic squabbles and unpleasantness we are constantly hearing of, are caused by girls marrying before they are old enough to realize the solemn responsibilities resting upon them, when they speak the irrevocable words that bind them, until death parts in release them. Young girls of sixteen or seventeen will talk of their wedding with the attention of their lovers, and the first time they expect to have—but not one word of the solemn vows they are to pledge before God and man. Well, the honeymoon is soon over, and they have to leave the airy heights of fancy, and settle down to the sober realities of life. Then their eyes are opened; their illusions vanish. They awake to find life full of cares and perplexities, and themselves totally unprepared to meet the conflict. They are too young to bear patiently their unaccustomed burdens. The intense feeling of dread their responsibilities bring, discourages them. They have not yet learned that though sorrow and pain are common attributes of life, yet joy and happiness are still to be found in the many labyrinth of existence. They have lived just long enough

PAYING BUSINESS.

A Look Through the Clothing Factory—
What is Doing in the East—
Pants in Four Months—An Enterprise
That Puts the Lure into Circulation.

"The Charlotte Clothing Manufacturing Company" is a big size in front of the third story of the Johnston Block. People who do not stop to think, have no idea of the significance of that signboard. It attracts the visitor to an enterprise that is bringing hundreds of dollars to Charlotte; that formerly went to New York and other northern cities. Messrs. E. D. Latta & Bro. are the leading spirits of this enterprise, which was inaugurated last fall and which is now no longer an experiment but an established success, working day and night to meet the demands made upon it by a steadily trade. The factory proper covers the entire third floor of the large block and is divided into three departments by neatly constructed lattice work. On one side of the room is the cutting and sewing departments, on the other side is the store room for made up goods and in the centre is the supply room. To the left on entering, a sample room, neatly carpeted and papered, is divided off. In this room samples of every piece of work made in the factory are shown. The counter is piled with pants that give evidence of the careful and excellent work of the cutters and sewers. The seams are corded and the work generally is, as good, if not better, than that in the finer ready-made goods from the Northern markets. These pants are supplied to the trade at from $6.75 to $15 per dozen. They are made up from a very fair article of goods and meet with ready sale. The clothing factory confines itself exclusively to the manufacture of pants, shirts and drawers. The latter are made from cloth brought from Southern mills, and for a good substantial article they cannot be excelled. The drawers sell at from $2.25 to $4 per dozen and the shirts at $3, $4.50 and $6.

A NORTH CAROLINA INVENTION.

Dr. Gatling Tells How he Came to Invent the Gatling Gun.

Dr. Gatling, the inventor of the Gatling gun, as everybody knows, is a native of Eastern North Carolina. In a recent Washington letter to the Cleveland Ledger, the story of his invention and its success is told in an interesting way. Dr. Gatling said:

"In 1861 I was living at Indianapolis. One surprise to me was that the number of men killed by sickness and all diseases was more than those killed by ball or actual battle. One day I remember ninety-two corpses were landed at the depot; three had been killed in battle. The thought then struck me if a gun could be invented that would do the work of a hundred men and would require but a few men to operate it, that the horrors of war would be greatly diminished, and an end would come much sooner of every struggle. The thought took such hold of me that I commenced to work on it at once. The result was a Gatling gun.

"My first guns were made in Cincinnati, and they would fire from 150 to 250 shots per minute. I had six of them manufactured in 1862, when the foundry was burned. Next I had thirteen guns made at what is now the type foundry in Cincinnati, and these I sent to Washington to persuade the Government to buy them. The chief of the Ordnance Department at the time was an old fogey. He had no faith in the gun, and believed the flintlock muskets were on the whole, the best weapons for warfare. Ben Butler bought them on his own responsibility, giving his voucher for $12,000 for them. Ben Butler took the guns he had bought with him to the battle of Petersburg and fired them himself. They created great consternation and slaughter, and the news of them went all over the world. Now they are used by all the leading governments of Europe and also in Asia and Africa. They enabled the Prussians to conquer Austria in 1866, though the Austrians had the larger forces, and they shrouded the war between Germany and France so that it practically lasted but a few days.

"The Gatling gun is now made in Hartford, in this country, and in Europe at Government and the United States use many of my guns. They now take a part of the work they have done in Egypt. The Gatling gun will send a ball from two to three miles.

"We can aim the gun at a plank called to a support several thousands yards away, and by moving the gun rapidly along while firing we can cut a line through the board as though it were wood. No two bullets leave the gun at the same time, but when you consider that 1,200 shots are fired in a minute you will see how rapidly and regularly it works."

THE SUNNY SOUTH.

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the disease which cause human suffering result from impurities of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S PILLS are a safe and reliable remedy, and are especially adapted to cure the diseases named by their name, and to relieve the system of all impurities. They are sold by all druggists.

THE BLATCHLEY PUMP!

BUY THE BEST.

BLATCHLEY'S PATENT PORTLAND-CEMENT PUMPS.

SEAMLESS TUBE COPPER-LINED.

Do not be misled by cheap imitations. The only reliable pumps are those made by C. C. Blatchley & Co., 308 MARKET ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE SHADOWED HOME.

In a richly furnished parlor, its crimson curtains closely drawn to shut out the piercing winter night, before a glowing fire in the grate, sat Charlie Hilton, his black hair well sprinkled with gray, and about 54 years of his life passed and gone, and his face, with its deep-set hazel eyes and compressed mouth, seemed like one much older. That face was one which would have been a study to the young, but some regret—some lasting shadow—was there. He was not happy. He had wealth and every outward means of happiness, save the dear faces by his bedside, and tones of home affection. In his palace-like home he lived alone. His housekeeper was faithful to her duty, and she only felt an interest in the lonely man. But he could not silence the thoughts that oppressed him—the aching want in his life. Ah! there was a shadow on Charlie Hilton's home, and heart, too; one of his own making.

His wife sleeps near the old church, and his only son, his devoted and true-hearted son, is no longer by his side. He kept his faith with the one loved, who he had loved, and for this he banished him from his home, an act that drove his image from his thoughts. But that he could not do. The sight of a child clinging to a father's knee, or clinging to his hand, always gave him a thrill of pain for the voice calling out halloo never failed to wake echoes in his soul he dreaded to hear. Every face he met in the street seemed to look at him with reproachful eyes. He saw his wife growing paler and thinner day by day, and though no word of complaint came from her lips, he knew his own hand had wrought this. Yet pride held him in his iron sway, and not till it was too late, not till the suffering mother lay on that bed from which she would rise only on the wing of an immortal life did he will bend. Then, in the loneliness and sorrow that followed, realizing for the first time that the feeble woman, no longer his, had been to him, his very soul was bowed, a regret aware that would not be silenced, and he would have given his whole fortune to undo what he had done.

Time passed on, and he became accustomed to his lonely life. At times, as he sat alone by his deserted bedside, the thought of his son grew so vivid, that he seemed to stand beside him. The white hair, the radiant brown hair, was the same, but the eyes with a sad reproachful look were then changed.

"Ten years today since Arnold left me," said Charlie Hilton to himself. It was a mild sunny spring morning, and opening the back and a scent of garden violets brought old tidings of that which should be. A sudden impulse came over him to visit Arnold's grave. It was a lovely shaded spot near the river, and the early flowers were beginning to bloom. Charlie Hilton stood there alone, as in God's great peace, and in those moments a glimpse of a higher, better life dawned on his soul. The thought thrilled him as never before. How soon he thought, must be down, his heart as still as those beneath the grass, his hand powerless to change aught he had done in life, and a great sorrow for the past came over him. Could he now make any reparation for the cruel wrong he had done his own child?

What startled him? What made the strong man tremble in every nerve? For the moment it seemed to him, a vision. A young girl passed with a basket of flowers on her arm. He had only a glimpse of her face, but the golden hair beneath the little sun hat, the step and bearing, told who it was. A great hunger sprang up in his heart, and he could not resist the impulse to follow her. He did so, slowly and not attracting her attention. She did not see him, as he sat on the grass, and in a wreath of the flowers she had brought, and singing a low street melody. But the revelation made there is not for mortal pen to describe. When he left there was peace between them.

Five years have passed since he took his little granddaughter, Sadie, home with him. Her presence has become the sunlight of his home, her voice the sweetest music that meets his ear, her hand alone rests on his temple with soothing touch, when sad memories oppress him, and ever, as she comes near, the shadows grow less.

His sits nursing alone this evening, and a shade of troubled thought is on his brow. Rarely does he talk to himself, but he feels lonely now, though Sadie has been away but a day. "Five years!" he says. "How happy we have been! And here this grimy fancy must upset it all. Why haven't I seen this before? Why didn't I stop it? Wonder if I wasn't an old dog to let them go off on that boat trip to-day? But, if I had refused, what then? It would only provoke Will and start him up, more resolute than ever. Like as my way. And as for Sadie, she'd have cried all day, I suppose. I'm in a pretty plight, I declare. I might have foreseen it, but the mischief, I didn't, when I took Will into the store, and let him come how so much. I don't want him to have her. He's poor as Job's cat—steady and good, to be sure—and loves her—no doubt of that. I'm not afraid he wouldn't be kind. I'm not afraid she would be happy. But I wanted my

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war greatly exceeds the loss sustained by the liberation of the slaves and the increase is the result of the development of the white people's energies and talents, which before the war had lain dormant. The exercise of these talents, however, is not the result of the war, but of the great and splendid industries of all kinds and in every branch of the country, which have been growing up in its own soil, and which are now being developed by the energy and industry of the white people. The one for the other, and which brings speedily returns, and which is well paid. Some things are well received, especially the cotton, and the wool, and the sugar, and the rice, and the tobacco, and the other products of the South. The South is now producing elsewhere than in the South."

Speaking of some things, such as in a General Cameron said:

"Gordon is upright and honest and open in his dealing. He is a very shrewd business man, and is getting rich through his coal mine and railroad operations. He will be one of the very rich men of the South some day. Yes, I am acquainted with Senator Ramsey of North Carolina—quite well acquainted, and I like him very much. Like Gordon, he is open and honest. He is not a man of any wealth and must, I believe, live somewhat economically."

GEN. SIMON CAMERON ON THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

"What do you think of the general condition of the South and what are its future prospects?"

"Undoubtedly the South is making rapid progress and is not behind the times. There are places where there is no reconstruction, but those are dead places. The progress of the general world of the South since the war