LINES RELATING AN INCIDENT OF GEN. R. E. LEE'S MEMORABLE REVIEW AT CULPEPER.

In the Editor of the Messenger.—All soldiers of the Army of Northern Virginia will remember a famous review of that army held by General R. E. Lee near Culpeper Court House, in June, 1863, just previous to the march into Pennsylvania. The following lines relate an incident of that review which, at this season of the Memorial observances especially, may be found interesting. The chaplain mentioned was Rev. Geo. Patterson, D. D. formerly of St. John's, Wilmington, and at that time chaplain of the Third Regiment of North Carolina Infantry, who wore his surplice during the review.

When the regiment passed General Lee—"Marse Robert" or "Babe" as he was affectionately called by his soldiers—he acknowledged its salute in a very marked way, looking to his saddle-bow with bared head. When asked why he did so he said: "I salute the Church of the Living God."

GRAHAM DAVES.

THE GREAT REVIEW.

There is to be a grand review boys, so ever that your arms are a bit.

"Marse" will forgive a shabby coat, but never a shabby fight.

And he today we're playing, and its nothing but a review.

We'll show, but not to tomorrow we'll have you with us.

So look at your shirt and collar, and see that your pants are clean.

Keep your feet to order, for you're to be seen. Don't let your feet be in a hole, or your pants in a hole.

For many a hard campaign "Marse" has not been in through.

But look at your old gray jackets, and do the best you can.

For he looks behind the military and sees the soldier.

11.

"Yes," said the Chaplain grandly, "and men, God looks on you."

There in every Sunday meeting, and there in your most dear.

Prepare your soul for inspection, and see that your hearts are right.

"And every man among you to stand against sin is right."

Remember your daily actions are the uniforms you wear.

And God will forgive the tatters if the love of Christ is there.

For the look is often weak when the spirit is truly willing.

Care with his ammunition our souls were always filling.

And when in the eyes of the world you outwardly may be right.

Without the love of the Savior, you can never win the fight.

So look at your uniforms well and do the best you can.

Your conscience behind the soldier God looks at the heart of man."

111

And this word in season, the Chaplain spoke to them then.

And it fell not by the wayside but into the hearts of the men.

And when they stood for inspection in the grand review.

He, in the dress of his office, stood with his cap on his head.

And he said "although I honor my coat of Confederate gray.

I wear the fall dress uniform of a priest of God to-day.

And this is my battle flag that before my men I'll bear."

And as he spoke he showed them the book of common prayer.

And when in his moments beside his men he stood.

A grand cry heard reverently: "To the Church of the Living God."

HOW TO CONVERSE.

What a woman should aim at in conversation is not only to entertain by giving her own thoughts, but at the same time to draw out those of others, especially the bashful men. Nothing pleases a man so much, nothing gives him such an idea of his superiority, as to allow him an opportunity of imparting information, though he may not have penetration enough to discern that it is the fact of the woman that entices him into talk about what perhaps he knows less than she. I remember hearing it remarked of Mrs. Cleveland that she was a charming conversationalist, because she always chose topics which she knew would interest others; and in this lies the whole secret of the art of conversing.

A celebrated French woman who had a slender waist, beauty, not position to elevate her in social circles, rose to the highest rank among the court during the latter days of royalty, simply by her art of pleasing in conversation. Brilliance in conversation is not the essential characteristic. Some of the most charming talkers are neither bright nor witty as learned; but the truth is we love to hear those speak who really feel what they say, whose words are choice without being childish or slangy. We love to listen to those whose purity of soul shines in their conversation, and we feel that words are but the personification of the beauty within.—Philadelphia Times.

LIVE WITHIN YOUR INCOME.

Never be in an unfeigned hurry.

Think nothing in conduct unimportant or indifferent.

Be guarded in discourse, attentive and slow to speak.

Maintain dignity without the appearance of pride.

It is a good rule to be deaf when a slanderer talks.

Never acquiesce in immoral or pernicious opinions.

Avoid as much as possible either borrowing or lending.

Words are wise men's counters, but the money of fools.

Manner is something with everybody, and everything with some.

Truth is the property of no individual, but is the treasure of all men.

Troubles spring from idleness, and grievous toils from needless ease.

A man who is always well satisfied with himself is seldom so with others, and others are as little pleased with him.

The haughtiness of humanity is as great a sin as any other form of pride. Humility through pride or selfishness is hypocrisy.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying in other words that he is wiser today than he was yesterday.

Mental pleasures never decay. Unlike those of the body, they are increased by repetition, approved of by reflection, and strengthened by enjoyment.

The only reward of virtue is virtue, the only way to have a friend is to be one. The essence of friendship is oneness, a total magnanimity and trust.

If a man be gracious to strangers it shows he is a citizen of the world, and that his heart is no island cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins.

APPRECIATED TOO LATE.

"We were married thirty-seven years," said Mr. Gardner Andrews; "and in all that time my wife never gave me a cross word. But I shall never forget the first time I chided her. It was on a Sunday morning when we had been married about two years. I found a button off my shirt, and threw it across the room. 'See a button off,' I said, in a brutal voice. She was a good Christian woman, and was preparing for church, but she got the button and sewed it on."

"And what did she say?" asked a little, bristling woman with snapping eyes.

"She said, 'Forgive me, husband. I had a great deal to do yesterday and forgot it, but it shall never happen again.'"

"O," said the man, fixing his eyes on the picture of his dead wife, "her gentle words almost broke my heart. I could have gone down on my knees to ask her forgiveness. She made a different man of me and the world has been a different place since she died."

There was a silence as he finished speaking, interrupted by a general clearing of throats and a confused snuffling, as we all had had cold, and the little woman's eyes looked suspiciously dim.

MUSIC OF THE SPHERES.

IMAGINATIVE THOUGHTS BY A NOTED WRITER ON A HIGHLY POETICAL THEME.

"Perhaps there is a music of the spheres, but we can only imagine it, we know nothing of it. I have sometimes thought that if a blind spirit could be supported in space so as to hear, as this globe rolled by him, the notes that are borne on it—the myriads of melody of birds, the sweeping of winds over all the zones, and the sheet of sound, now somber, now cheerful—they waken from the forests while they stir—the low, hissing pensive of the peaceful sea, and, through all, the thunderous mellow bass of the stirred ocean, heaving on a thousand leagues of rock—that spirit might imagine it was a mighty organ rolling by, touched on every key, alive in every spot, and aroused by every peal in the praise of God.

"But we can only conjecture what the blended voices of this plane may be heard as a whole. In the music of nature, so far as we hear it in detail, no idea is worked into and struggles through even its vast vibrations. And it is only when a mighty thought or sentiment rolls through waves of sound, combining them so that they co-operate on our heart and mind that pure sublimity begins. All else that we call sublimity is only a surprise of the senses."—Thomas Starr King.

ARTIFICIAL EYES.

A DOCTOR TALKS ABOUT MISTAKEN IDEAS OF THESE ARTICLES.

The artificial eye man in Portland was talking, and he told some queer stories about the business. He said that it very often required an expert to detect an artificial eye. "I often have a customer come in here, look at my artificial eyes and talk something like this: 'Oh, yes, I always had an idea that Mr. Sanderson was an artificial eye. His is based, just like that one in the corner.' I find, ten chances to one, that if the person referred to wears a glass eye at all, my customer believes the natural eye is glass and the glass eye the one through which he gets his vision. I know of a man who lived with his wife a year before he found out she wore a glass eye. Oh, yes, they turn just like the human eye, and in a majority of instances, possess more fire and snap than the actual one. It is astonishing the number of Maine people who wear those goods. I fit lots of them in a week. Oh, no, there is no pain about fitting them.

"People sometimes think they are going to be killed, but it only makes them laugh. I get a lot for a glass eye, and come under a contract to add to the beauty of the physiognomy of my customer 50 per cent. I have seen people sit an hour before a looking glass after I had fitted them with my goods, admiring their new eyes."—Leiston Journal.

THE MAN IN THE MOON.

"I could gaze at the moon for hours," Mr. Sampson, she said in a voice full of sweetness and piousness, "I never will tire of it."

"Ah," he responded, "would that I were the man in it."

"Yes," she assented softly.

"And why, Miss Clara?" he asked, getting ready to take her hand.

"Because, Mr. Sampson," she said, shyly veiling her eyes with their long lashes, "you would be 4,000,000 miles away."—Epoch.

THE SORT OF FISH CAUGHT BY ANGELES.—The fish in the Sea of Galilee have lately been classified and prove to belong to the species peculiar to the African lakes, not to the Mediterranean kind, as hitherto believed. It is therefore suggested that the Jordan Valley in long past ages must have been filled by a lake joining the Red Sea, which was then a fresh-water lake, and which in its turn may have directly communicated with the great lake system of Central Africa.

"My dear," said a lady to her husband as she was looking over the newspaper, "what are preferred credits?" "They are the—the—the—creditors who never send in their bills. Let's say that's the kind that I prefer."

THE SNOWDROP.

A LEGEND OF CHEN WHICH RADIATES FROM THE AMERICAN BIR.

The arrival of snowdrops in the city gardens as the first blossoms of the present season recalls a medieval legend in regard to the origin of the flower. It states that "one day after the fall Eve stood in paradise lamenting the barrenness of the earth, which no longer produced vegetation and where no flowers grew. An angel, pitying her sad condition, exposed as she was to the blinding snow which was falling at the time, came down to earth to try to console her.

"He listened to her complaints, and, being moved with pity for so much grief, took in his hand a flake of the snow, and, breathing upon it, had it take the form of a flower and bud and blow. He at the same time added that the little blossom should be a sign and a symbol to her that the winter was over, and that the sun and the summer would soon return. On raising her eyes to express her gratitude to the angel he was nowhere to be seen, but on the place where he had stood was a snow-white ring, which she had no difficulty in recognizing as composed of snow drops."—Boston Journal.

COLD ENOUGH FOR YOU.

"Out of a herd of fifty legs," said a Dakota farmer to a New reporter, "all but one had their tails frozen off, while many of their ears had fallen victims to the prying knife of the blizzard. Cows are also deprived of their tails, which, rendered brittle by the frost, snap off like glass. In Dakota you will never find a chicken to survive the winter without. The claws are generally gone, and we have then to provide them with spare roots, as they would fall off round ones. I am in possession of information that a horse froze to death in its stall near a horse farm, which is situated in the southeastern section of the territory.

"Everybody in Dakota expects to be frozen at some time or other, although all wear felt boots and from two to four pairs of socks. I, with two of my boys, went one day to Dixon on business. When three miles out of home I was frozen, and I was brought home reasonable. Oh, it is terrible. You find people with both hands and legs off. Down to zero we consider the weather warm, 30 or 40 degrees below zero we call it cold."
