NOVEL DISCIPLINE.

A Penitentiary Where Men Employed as Reforming Agents.

One of the most interesting recent experiments in food is now going on in the California State prison, California has established the Folsom State prison among the hills near the head of the American river. The scenery is fine, the air pure and the water excellent. The convicts are chiefly employed in quarrying and dressing granite. The building is rough, solid and substantial. It has the usual system of bars and arrangements for securing ventilation. The inmates have their hair cropped and wear the usual distinctive prison garb. It is in the manner of supplying food that this prison differs from others. The convicts, when they first arrive, are fed as those who show little inclination to work or disposition to be vicious are supplied with a rather poor food consisting largely of boiled beans, salted,评价, mush, common bread, and coffee served without milk. If not within sight of the table where this coarse food is served, there is within smell of it another on which fresh beef and mutton, various kinds of vegetables, rice, and on Sunday cake, syrup and tea are placed. The convicts learn that he who sits at this table are allowed considerable liberty and are permitted to take walks after each meal. The desire to sit at this table is great. Men who do not like to work enjoy good living and are generally willing to be at considerable pains to secure it. The inmates of this penitentiary necessarily adopt such a course as will enable them to sit at the table within a few months of their entrance. When taking their first breakfast at it, they perceive the odor of beefsteak, mutton chops, hot rolls and fine soups that proceed from an adjacent table. They learn that there are east and mutton, salisbury and pudding there. For dinner, while for supper there are steaks, chops, fried potatoes, tea and several kinds of fruit. The price of admission to this table is strict attention to hygiene, respect for all rules and regulations, and the constant observance of propriety. The food comes high, but most of the convicts are anxious to obtain it, and many of them do. —Cor. Atlantic Journal.

Shoe for Fashionable Women.

Lowest, newest and handsomest shoes of dressed leather, for dressy home wear, and later in the season will be worn with appropriate afternoon toilet over silk stockings of the same shade. The Egyptian shoe of Swedish kid or a dark serpent green shade that is almost black has the diamonds set in with a design in dark silk threads. The Roman shoe of deep red kid is strapped over the design and fastened by a buckle of thin silver, with a Roman medallion head in the center. The Oriental shoe is of black satin, lined with crimson or cardinal silk, the toe worked with fine cut steel beads. The Chinese sandal is of dove-gray kid, embroidered with cut and silver threads. This has medium high heels and the usual pointed and pointed toe. The Diogenes sandal of black kid, silk-embroidered with terrace, to be worn with silk hose to match. The Richelieu shoe, half low, half of bony, is a short foot-covering to be worn with silk stockings of gold or brown or tan color in brilliant laces.

—Every Senator Ingalls says that his father was the original owner of the Egyptian shoe.

—Rev. Robert Collyer, at the age of twenty-seven, came to this country with his bride in the steerage.

—Congressman McKinley, of Ohio, bears a striking resemblance to Napoleon Bonaparte, while the profile of Representative Baker, of New York, is almost an exact reproduction of George Washington's side face.

—Miss Helen Gould, eldest daughter of Jay Gould, devotes much of her time and money to charitable works, especially among the young. She is a regular visitor to the New York Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled Children.

—Every Senator who has visited Senator Palmer's Michigan farm has a tree planted there in his honor. Among them is a hickory that recalls Senator Sherman's visit, a mulberry for Senator Jones, and an aromatic cedar for Senator Edmunds. Senators Blair, Sulzer, Manderson and Colquitt are also represented there in the natural wood.

—Alexander Graham Bell, of telephone fame, was a penitent boy in Edinburgh twenty-five years ago. He is now forty years old, and is described as a handsome man of modest demeanor. He came to this country in 1872, and has a beautiful home in Washington. His wife is a dear wife, but she and her husband converse just as well as other people, for he understands every movement of her lips, as she does of his.

—Some idea of what Romeo, Conkling thought of death may be gained from his analogy of Oliver P. Morton, delivered shortly after that statesman's death, in the Senate Chamber.—"Death," he said, "is nature's supreme abomination."

—In answer Porter said: "Give us a Naval Academy. The one at Philadelphia is only an apology for one, worthy of the country. Go down to Annapolis and obtain from the War Department its reservations on the banks of the Severn and there build a naval school which will be worthy of the country and a monument to yourself!" And it was done.

—Admiral Porter is justly entitled to be called the "founder of the Naval Academy." When Mr. Bancroft was Secretary of the Navy he said to Porter: "What can I do to improve the service?" In answer Porter said: "Give us a Naval Academy. The one at Philadelphia is only an apology for one, worthy of the country. Go down to Annapolis and obtain from the War Department its reservations on the banks of the Severn and there build a naval school which will be worthy of the country and a monument to yourself!" And it was done.

—Judge Gary, who presided over the trial of the Anarchists, is considered the sternest man on the Chicago bench. But there is a soft side to his heart. Those who know him best say that he and Mrs. Gary are as fond of each other as when they were first married; though the heads of both are white with age. She bids him goodby at the door when he starts down town in the morning, and waves him till he turns the corner, where he invariably looks back and waves a final goodby, and his return at evening is greeted with as much joy as in the brave and sturdy old days.
