A SAD EXPERIENCE.

Or Why Hercales P. Smith was Up a Tree in More Ways than One.

It was during the progress of the pie e given in Jurnigan's Grove by the Methodist Subbath school of Hawville, Alkali Ike, who sings bass in the hoir, and Miss Lillie Cusack, the oprano, had wandered a short distance om the scene of the festivities and eated themselves on a moss-covered log which lay at the foot of a tall tree.

The gallant's arm had strayed around the maiden's slender waist and lingered asked, for the sixteenth time:

"We'll soon see " remarked Ike grim ly, at the same time drawing his revolver and firing a few shot into the foliage above. "I'll stir the varmint up a little, anyhow." At that instant a reproachful voice was heard proceeding from the canopy

"How long, oh, Lord? How long? "What the dev--; that is, who are you?" demanded Ike.

"All that remains of Hercules P. Smith," was the reply. "I was in swim-ming before the picknickers came, and a sow ate up the most of my clothes before I noticed her. I chased her through a blackberry tangle, and then a stray log, that appeared to be mad, chased me back again. Then the coming of the Sabbath school drove me up this tree, and here I have been ever since, with a hornets' nest on one bough and a snake on another. And now you are trying to finish the job by assassinating me."

"Well, you see, I happen to be engaged myself to Miss Cusnek, whom you

In nothing should we be less economical than in politeness. It should lead us to prompt and generous acknowledgment of every kindness, to responsive thanks when a gift, however small, is brought to our door. It should oblige us to listen with patient attention even to the person whose conversation is not entertaining, to sit apparently absorbed when in public we are seated at a concert or a lecture. Whatever else he needs, the man needs love most of all, for this is a hard life and love alone keeps him in trim for the contest. If he cannot have it he takes excitement instead and then the end is not far off. Whatever else the woman craves, it is all subor a lecture. This defensive armor, so ordinate, whether she knows it or not, to smooth, so polished, so easily worn, will the confiding affection of a manly man, make our intercourse with society agree and if that is denied her her nature becomes volcanic and irrepressible.

Without the restraining influence of love we all become more or less demoniac. But if we have it we can part with everything besides and still be content. That is the verdict of the generations, and it

In your home, therefore, and regarding your children, you should teach the boys and girls that they will develop in dependence of character and moral principle.
