VELLOW JENGAMINE.

O, golden bells that swing and sway
In the deeps of seuthern wildwood,
Where balmiest breezes gently play,
Like mem'ries of happy childhood. Gently, slow,

You swing in the scented air, nd your dainty chimes softly swell, Calling fairy folk 'o prayer,

The merry dances now have ceased And the flower bells are pealing, While fairy tolk and fairy priest Are on mossy carpets kneeling. Tender, slow,

Sweet and low The mystic tones, faint, remote, like echoes soft from cloister tower, On evening zephyrs lightly float.

With lavish bloom and trailing vine, The fairest of southern flowers Its graceful tendrils closely twine, Making dusky, dreamy bowers. Soft winds blow

To and fro The fragrant, clustering bells, And music dumb to mortal cars, Is heard in the clan dells,

A Giant.

HE IS YOUR ENEMY, BOYS, LOOK OUT, DON'T BE DE-CEIVED.

Every boy has some giants to fight.

All these have one father-the Deviland they belong to the same family. Let me tell you about one of these giants that I have been fighting for the last fifty years. He has thousands of dens the robbery?

The young man was apparently trying to say good could not bear him, for she was bending her head close to his. They stood in that attitude for nearly 15 minutes and might have been discovered in the same pose by the gray dawn of the morning had not something intervened.

That something was round and bright and it came out of a sixth story window. It descended slowly, the moonlight shim mering on its silvery surface and making it conspicuous. Soon it could be seen that it was a string and was being lowered by an elderly woman. When it dangled over the portico, there was a sudden burr r-r r r r r ring, and the young man and the young woman parted like an overstrained hawser. The young man seized the round and bright object, which was still ringing, and held its face to the electric light. The hands on the slarm clock were clasped at midnight. He raised his hat to the young woman, murmured a few words in a low tone and disappeared. The alarm clock was hoist es up quickly, but the young woman was up stairs before it reached the open window.—New York Sun.
