Down in the garden there, Marigolds, hollyhocks, prince's feather, Bowed low in the dim, soft light, As under the willow tree by the gate I kissed you and said, "Good night."

Ab, sweetheart mine, with the pale, mute lips. We have had our measure of rue;

The clouds were dark and the skies were fair, But you forever were true, And now as I sit in the dark alone
I would give the world to know

The way through the years to that far off Where simples for heartache grow.

Love fades, they say, when the pulse i And I am three-core and ten. But what I have learned with

Lies far beyond their ken: tomorrow they hide you away, sweet

In the graveyard out of my sight, o I beap the roses—God's roses— And kiss you and sav, "Good night."

INTO THE VAST FOREVER.

What may we carry to the vast forever? The mystic stair Admits not gold, nor whatsoever Of pomp or pride we wear-

These pass not there-Nor may we take within the sacred portal Our books and art, Into the life immortal No idol of the heart;

With these we part. We may not carry to the land supernal Our boasted creeds.

These drop and disappear like blossoms,
And all our deeds

Are poor as weeds But character and conscience shall attend

The genial flow Of sympathizing hearts, and sense stupen Of happiness or woe Shall with us go.

For charity's fair form is ever parted, The pearly door

For all the sanctified and holy-hearted
it spreads the golden floor,

Upward from the vast forever Naked we come.

Lord clothe us with Thy robe, that we may never

Be put to fear or shame, Who own Thy name,

Ask we the Pleiades or grand Orion To lend a ray?

While journeying to the hill of Zion
Thou art the light, the way,
Nor need we stray.

From Thee the glory of the life eternal Forever be With Thee our days shall glide in joy su-

A CHINAMAN ON LACING.

Here is what one Chinaman says in the North China Daily News about "Corsets Against Small Shoes:

"What is the use of binding the feet? It is the same use as tightening the waist among you Europeans. Do you tighten the waist for comfort? No Is it to make one look faller or shorter? No. Then what is it for? It is for beauty: It is to catch the eyes of men. So is foot binding. They are both for the benefit of men. Foot binding does not do as much harm as waist rightening.
