A MALICIOUS MEDDLER.

The Young Woman Had Very Good Ground for Detesting Him.

Two well-dressed and attractive young women—business girls, apparently—rattled into a car the other morning and took seats. After they were comfortably adjusted, with parcels and umbrellas, the one in the blue cloth suit scanned the two men who sat opposite, and remarked to her companion: "It's too near the stove here; let's move down."

Then the girls arose, and took seats farther down, out of range of the two men. "What was the matter, Clara?" the other girl asked; "it wasn't really too warm back there?"

"No," the first girl answered with spirit, "but that horrid man with the brown hat and overcoat sat near us. He is always on the ear near me, Laura, and I detest the sight of him."

"I don't know him," commented Laura; "who is he?"

"Why I don't know him, either," Clara explained; "but I won't sit where I have to look at him."
"Has he ever been rude to you?" asked Laura.

"Rude? I think so. About three months ago I dreamed I was standing before the altar in a lovely church all decorated with palms and flowers and was just about to be married—oh, to such a handsome man, Laura, and that hideous old thing in the brown hat and coat—the very same man—came rushing down the aisle and arrested my promised husband for bigamy."—Detroit Free Press.

THE TREASURE OF HOPE.

O fair bird, singing in the woods,
To the rising and the setting sun,
Does ever any throb of pain
Thrill through thee ere thy song be done;
Because the summer flees so fast;
Because the autumn fades so soon;
Because the deadly winter treads
So closely on the steps of June?

O sweet maid, opening like a rose
In love's mysterious, honeyed air,
Dost thou sometimes the day will come
When thou shalt be no longer fair
When love will leave thee and pass on
To younger and brighter eyes;
And thou shalt live unloved, alone,
A dull life, only dowered with sighs?

O brave youth, panting for the fight,
To conquer wrong and win thee fame,
Dost see thyself grown old and spent,
And thine a still unhonored name;
When all thy hopes have come to naught,
And all thy fair schemes droop and pine
And wrong still lifts her hydra head
To fall to younger arms than thine?

Nay; song and love and lofty aims
May never be where faith is not;
Strong souls within the present live;
The future veiled—the past forgot,
Grasping what is, with hands of steel,
They bend what shall be, to their will;
And blind alike to doubt and dread,
The End, for which they are, fulfill.

—Lewis Morris.

WANTED.

WANTED—A man who is gentle and just, A man who is upright and true to his trust—Who cares more for honor than he cares for pelf, And who loves his neighbors as himself.

Who's sober and earnest, and merry and gay,
Who cheerfully shoulders the cares of the day;
Whose principle's high, whose integrity's strong,
Who'd rather do right any time than do wrong,
Yet who to a sinner shows sorrow and pity.
Wanted—a man—is there one in the city?

Wanted—a woman—no saint, understand,
But a womanly woman, who, on every hand,
Sheds the luster of purity, goodness and grace,
Who carries her loveliness stamped on her face;
Whose wisdom's intuitive, insight is deep,
Who makes living sunshine where life's shadow's creep;

Who's poised in her little world's center; and who is gentle, responsive and tender and true;
Whose sweetness and graciousness fit like a gown—
Do you think I might find such a one in the town?
—Chris Cross.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

"It is kinder funny—that is, over-looks the seriousness of it," said the landlord of the Pettysville tavern. "You see, Miss Gabriella Lank, who has—no meaning any disrespect to her you understand—been an old maid so long that it generally believed to be chronic, approached the railroad crossin', and a brakeman waved a red flag at her to warn her of the danger. She thought he was tryin' to flirt with her, and advanced toward him with a smile; and a caboose that was backin' up struck her good and plenty. Luckily no bones were broken; and the first thing she said when she recovered consciousness was: "Oh, this is so sudden!"—April Smart Set.

A REAL FRIEND.
"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my indigestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Kodol enables you to assimilate what you eat by digesting it without the stomach's aid. W. M. Cohen.

REALIZING MARRIAGE IDEALS.

The Most Dangerous Infernal Machine In A Home Is The Last Word.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Love, purified by religion, is the very life of marriage. But prayers in the home won't make up for everything. Some of the most pious people are the most peculiar, and require of you the most grace to get along with. Let love rule! Love is never stubborn. Love will make each blame self and not the other when things go wrong. It transforms blemishes into imaginary virtues.

The most dangerous infernal machine in a home is the last word. Every dispute between man and wife forces good humor out of its channel, undermines affection and gradually destroys that cordiality which is the soul of matrimonial harmony.

Politeness is not to be used only in our intercourse with strangers, but is intended for home consumption. Carry over into the wedded life the same delicate thoughtfulness, gentleness of manner, courtesy of speech, warmth of affection and innocent sacrifice that characterized your wooing days.

Your wife has a sacred right to some expression of appreciation of her usefulness devotion to your interests. You may be full of loyal devotion to her, though for want of comprehension of a nature more sensitive than your own never assure her of your appreciation.

Let your husband feel that you think him good, and it will be a strong stimulus to his being so. As long as he thinks he possesses the character he will take some pains to deserve it, but when you make him feel he has lost the name he will soon abandon the reality.

Never speak to anyone outside of one another's faults. Keep your own secrets—Pay attention to little things. Estrangements are rarely the work of one day or caused by one offense. They are growths. "It is the little rill within the lute that by and by will make the music mute."

Make home everything. Men running day by day against this lightning-footed twentieth century, weary and heavy laden with the toils in the world's workshops, harassed by the cares and competition of trade and dull rounds of professional life, years for the repose of home. There let warm greetings come from appreciative hearts, fond glances from bright eyes, the little arrangements for their comfort that silently tell them of thoughtful love and force them, before they know it, into an easy chair and make them spend the evening at home because they can't get away.

THE LIGHT GONE OUT.

A man who had lost his much beloved wife consulted a stone mason in regard to the erection of a tombstone with a suitable epitaph. After having a number of lines suggested he finally selected the following: "The Light of My Life Has Gone Out."

A short time afterwards the widower fell in love with a very charming girl, to whom he became engaged. He immediately felt concerned about the epitaph upon the tombstone of his former wife, and again consulted the stone mason, to whom he explained the circumstances, and stated that the epitaph would have to be changed. He intended to leave town returning on the day of the wedding and implored the mason to take the matter in hand and alter the epitaph so that the feelings of his prospective wife would not be hurt. This the mason promised to do, and when the widower returned he visited the grave at once, finding that the mason had been true to his word, the epitaph now appearing: "The Light of My Life Has Gone Out, but I Have Another Match."

THE DIFFERENCE.

"Wherein lies the difference between photography and courtship?" he asked softly.

"I don't know," she replied.

"In photography," he explained, "the negative is developed in the dark-room, while in courtship that is where the affirmative is developed."

She blushed, but made no answer.

"Let us," he suggested, "proceed to develop an affirmative."

NOBILITY IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Three Orders of Nobility Created by the Lords Proprietors, In the Colony of Carolina.

The following article from the pens of Messrs. Waddy Thompson and Joseph H. McLean first appeared in the Atlanta Constitution, and is reproduced at the request of a subscriber in Atlanta, Ga.

"There were three orders of Nobility created in the Colony of Carolina by the Lords Proprietors. It should be noted, however, that the Palestine was not an order of Nobility. It was a single executive office, the supreme head of the government and higher than the nobility. It was held by the eldest of the Lords Proprietors and upon his decease the eldest of the surviving Proprietors succeeded him. In the list here given the palatines are named in order of their succession. The nobility was composed of, first, the landgraves and, second, the caciques. The charter granted by the crown to the Proprietors authorized the establishment of a nobility in the province, but required that those composing it should be selected only from the inhabitants of the colony. The famous "Fundamental Constitution" of the colony, written by the philosopher Locke, provided for this nobility in article six, as follows: "There shall be just as many landgraves as there are counties, and twice as many caciques and no more. These shall be the hereditary nobility of the province," etc. The requirement that the nobility be selected only from the inhabitants of the colony was not always observed, for some of those selected were residents of England or of other colonies.
