TOM WATSON, unrelenting and irrepressible populist, has this to say of Bryan's trip abroad.

"No wonder Mr. Bryan is going abroad for two years. The Democratic party is so bankrupt in policy, principle and reputation, the ship is so rudderless, masted and weed-logged."

At any rate Mr. Bryan has been one of the greatest political slugs the party has ever had, and if he will only remain abroad until after the next national election what a blessing to Democracy it would prove.

Some people have an idea that locomotive engineers run down cows on the track and kill them for the fun of the thing. Nothing could be further from the truth. As a matter of fact, there are few things that an engineer finds more so to the west in front of him than a cow, and with good reason. The reason is to be found in the dispatch in yesterday's paper which told of a double-header on the Hills Central, running through Lewis, striking a cow, which was, of course, killed, but which caused a wreck and two engineers, two firemen and a brakeman their lives. Not much fun is that—Charlotte Observer.

At no previous time in the history of the United States has there been so much uncertainty preceding a Congressional session with reference to the legislative proceedings. Party lines appear to be in every direction. Mason and Dixon's line appears to be in a state of oscillation. A Republican administration will have strong Democratic support in the House and in the Senate. Some Republicans in both Houses will oppose the President if they dare to do so. On the tariff question, on reciprocity, on railroad rate legislation and almost every national question, the administration will have support from sections of the country that have heretofore been unfriendly. All signs indicate that party lines will be to a great extent disregarded.

TUESDAY'S ELECTIONS.

In New York the contest for mayor was close and exciting. It appears that McClellan is elected over Hearst and Irvin. Jerome is re-elected for District Attorney over Osborne who gave him a close run.

Ohio is reported to have been swept by a Democratic tidal wave.

The reform party wins in Philadelphia by an overwhelming majority.

Virginia elects entire State ticket by reduced majority.

The result in Maryland is in doubt. Proposed amendment to the constitution is defeated.

"HYDE will take the witness stand," says a New York paper. That's about the only thing he has not already "taken."

SENATOR PLATT considerably refused to lend the hand of his support to any of the candidates in the New York City contest.

MARK ANTONY was right about it, when he said that "the evil that men do, lives after them." Witness the activity of the Quay political machine.

A rambunctious husband in Norfolk, Virginia, has been sentenced by a judge to kiss his wife twice a day. Look out for a biting story later.

SECRETARY ROOR proposes to have the consular service taken out of politics. We can just imagine Congressmen falling over one another in their anxiety to vote appropriations for non-political consular service.

It is thought that Senator Lodge's chronic insomnia will disappear when he gets back into the superior atmosphere of the Senate chamber and under the influence of one of Senator Morgan's speeches on the Panama Canal.

An Ohio minister says that he has received "a mysterious impression" that he should make a trip around the world. That's fine, if the steamship agent receives a mysterious impression to furnish him with the required ticket.

SENATOR FORAKER is being criticised because he does not approve the Esch-Townsend railway rate bill. This seems unfair as there is no prospect that the Esch-Townsend advances will approve Senator Foraker's bill on the subject.

THAT is a queer statement of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst that he was put in possession of the evidence 10 years ago showing all these exposed methods of the big insurance companies. The reason he didn't make use of this evidence, according to his own statement in his pulpits, was that it would have been too much like planting a dynamite bomb under the throne of Satan. This sounds very much like an even shake between participants and cowardice.—New Orleans States.

THE LADIES favor painting their churches, and therefore we urge every ministry to remember that we give a literal quantity of the Langman & Mattox L. & M. Paint toward the paint.

Wears and covers like gold.
Don't pay $1.50 a gallon for Lined Oil (worth 60 cents) which you do when you buy other paints in a can with a paint label on it.

8 and 6 make 14, therefore when you want 14 gallons of paint, buy only eight of L. & M., and mix six gallons pure Lined Oil with it, and thus get paint at less than $1.20 per gallon.

Many houses are well painted with four gallons of L. & M. and three gallons of lined mixed therewith.

Wears and covers like gold.

TALES ABOUT PUMPKINS.

HALIFAX COUNTYMAN CLAIMS THE HANSEN.

In a recent issue of the Danbury Reporter there is a story about a prize pumpkin vine and the pumpkins thereon.

Mrs. F. M. Venable has a pumpkin vine which came up voluntarily and one branch of it measures 54 feet, while another is 29 feet long. The vine has on it 19 fine pumpkins and is a little show to see. Who can beat it?

That is "some pumpkin" rare enough. The Industrial News, of Greensboro, assuming to know something about pumpkins, and boasting an agricultural editor, copied the following and added this:

The foregoing was referred to the agricultural editor, who, after diligent inquiry, felt authorized to say that the prize pumpkin vine cannot be beaten on the side of the Mississippi river. This qualification of geographical limits is inserted because the agricultural editor once heard of a pumpkin vine in Kansas that grew so fast that it wore the pumpkins out on the ground in its effort to outgrow the limits of the Southern State. After all, however, it is open to doubt whether the Kansas pumpkin vine beats the Stokes article or not, for, although the farmer holds the record for rapid growth the latter gets credit for producing a full crop of fine material. At any rate it will do to tie to the statement that our esteemed contemporary's pumpkin vine cannot be beaten by anything in this year of the moral vineyard.

That Kansas vine was a hummer, and the story has been told for years whenever anybody dared to spin a pumpkin yarn. It was from long law, anyhow, and nobody cared to dispute it, as there was no one to vouch for its truthfulness.

A man who once lived in Chatham county, but who had removed to another county, told the writer a pumpkin story. And before we relate it we want to inform you that he was a member of the church in good standing at the time, was on the official board a number of years prior to his death, and finally died in good standing without charges having been preferred against him.

He said that when he was a boy living on his father's farm in Chatham county he was a witness to a most remarkable occurrence. Along a little creek that ran through the farm were strips of land the richest he ever saw, and that in the fall the dogs would free squirrels up corn stalks in these narrow little fields, and that he was really afraid to say how large the pumpkins grow there, but as an illustration, that he remembered one fall a large brood sow disappeared from the pasture on the opposite side of the creek from one of the small fields. The place had been searched in all the open space time and again without revealing the whereabouts of the lost hog. Finally, along late in November, he was in the lower end of the "patch" near the creek, and the leaves had fallen from the vines and bushes about the bank, so that he noticed that a pumpkin had crossed the creek on an old log from which was suspended a water-gate. Desiring to see how far the vine had run into the woods on the other side he crossed over and followed the vine into the wilderness of bushes and briars. There to his great surprise he found a pumpkin with a hole in the side, and the lost sow and nine beautiful six-week-old pigs comfortably bedded on the inside. He figured it out that the sow had eaten the hole in the pumpkin and for at least four weeks had been living off of the seeds.

Who can beat this?—Raleigh Post.

There is only one man in the country who can beat it, and he lives in Halifax county. Some years ago he planted some pumpkin seed in Mash Island. The plants came up, the vines began to grow. Strange to say, he did not get a pumpkin, but such vines! They raced down to the banks of Roanoke river, crossed the stream, where the old Petersburg railroad bridge formerly stood, by reaching from one pillar to the other and making a complete foot bridge. All that fall the people of Northampton and Halifax counties used the vine bridge to cross the river. He accounts for the absence of pumpkins from the rapid growth of the vines. They ran so fast, he says, that they did not have time to even bloom.

Dear Sir: The handsome residence of Oliver Gildersleeve on Main street, Portland, Conn., was painted in 1888 with Devco and again in 1901.

There's 13 years; there are hundreds of such; the difficulty is to bear of 'em.

Reminds of another. The Farrington residence, Rockland, Maine, was painted Devco 21 years; the paint was in fair condition 5 years ago, when we saw it; don't know any more. Our agents there, Messrs. Farrand, Spear & Co., know. Enclose a stamp if you write 'em.
