Few middle-aged country-bred men and women but will tell you that life can offer nothing comparable with the innocent zest of the old sivle courning done at singing school, in the starlight and candlelight of long ago:

THE OLD SINGING SCHOOL.

This is said to be an age of progress and marvelous invention, but the old-fashioned singing school is gone, and nothing takes its place. It gave to the love of good music an impetus that is still felt, and it doubtless discovered scores of voices that finally found their way to the great capitals of the world.

How simple it all was, and how pleasant ' The teacher went from schoolhouse to school, and was always a welcome guest at one house after another among his, patrons, Sometimes he brought with him a melodeon, with its myterious arrangement of folding legs and pedais; sometimes a violin; more often, however, only a tuning fork, whose "b-z-z-zz" was the delight of the small children.

At "early candle-lighting" the singers began to gather at the The singing book was usually suienriched with exercises for sight. reading in the introduction. These Boston Academy, The Modern Harp. The Sacred Lyne.

Life is a mystery as deep as death can be; Yet, oh! how dear it is to us, this life we live and see. The child who enters life comes not with knowledge of intent; So those who enter death must go as little children sent. Nothing is known. But I believe that God is overhead; And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

THE MISSING LINK.

Dear wife, I cannot tell you how I've missed you since you went away; The home is very lonesome now, Where did you put my suit of gray?

With no one to meet me at the dogr, With heavy heart I tread the blocks, That homeward lead I miss you more. But say, where did you hide my socks? How still and dull the house appears, I miss the sunlight of your eyes; The weeks you've been away seems years, What has become of my ties ?

I hope you will enjoy yourself, But do not mingle with the flirts; I've hunted every closet shelf, Wherever did you keep my shirts?

And now I've told you all the news, There's nothing more for me to write: Except where did you hide my shoes? They're not anywhere in sight.

GROWING GENEROUS. An Englishman and his friend, who was a Scotchman, were trav-eling, and at the last six stations the Englishman paid for drinks for both. At last the Scotchman's conscience began to prick him, and, when the Englishman proposed another drink at his expense, he said: "Ah, no! You paid for the last six drinks; we'll toss up for this one."
