This farmer telephoned and stayed at home.

This farmer went to market.

And find the market unfavorable for your produce? The farmer who has a telephone in his home can telephone first. The useless trips thus saved are worth the cost of service.

Under our plan the service costs but a trifle; the farmer owns the instrument and the equipment.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE-STUDY ON GOD'S INSTRUMENT IN PREPARATION.

Exodus 2:11, 25-27 July 13.

"Blood was on the door" (Exodus 12:13)

The education of Moses is briefly summed up in the biblical statement that he "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." Legend tells us something of his schooling in the philosophies of that time, and declares that he was a successful Egyptian general; but it is for us to follow the Bible account. The time was nearing when God intended to bring the Israelites out of Egypt into the Land of Promise--an illustration of the still more wonderful deliverance by the Greater than Moses, which now is nearing.

God's providences may be noted in respect to the experiences of Moses, who is credited by the Lord with having been "the meekest man in all the earth." God wanted a meek man for the important position which He intended Moses to fill. Moses' lessons and experiences helped to make him meek. Who can not see that, if he had been proud and arrogant, he would have been unfit for the duties and responsibilities devolving upon him as leader of his people? Perhaps no man had a more difficult task than that represented in Moses' forty years with Israel in the wilderness. We may be sure that he was prepared for the ordeal only by the experiences of the preceding eighty years of his life.

The adopted son of the Egyptian princess, Moses had been a court favorite, and in danger of cultivating pride and arrogance. As an offset, he had continually before him the fact that his features were Jewish, and that thus every one had knowledge of his identity with the despised and oppressed people. The tendency would naturally be toward one of two courses: Either he would seek to ignore the Hebrews and to become more and more identified with the Egyptians, or else he would exercise faith in the special promises of which his people were heirs as children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

St. Paul notes that Moses was a victor in this test. He chose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the honors which might have been his as an adopted member of the royal family. (Hebrews 11:24-26) To Moses the Promise which God made to Abraham, and repeated to Isaac and Jacob, and which still awaits fulfillment, was more to be desired than all the riches and honors of earth.

Moses Discouraged, Heartbroken.

Fronting in the Lord's Promise, Moses believed that the time had come for the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage. He knew well of his miraculous preservation, and had the assurance of God's Promise that this signified that God had a special work for him to do. He was anxious to begin that work. He knew not of his own unworthiness--that he would require forty years more of special schooling.

An occasion to show his zeal for his brethren came when he saw an Egyptian abusing one of them. Moses threw himself into the scuffle. The Egyptian was killed. Moses perceived that some of the Egyptians knew of the matter, so he quietly buried the victim in the sand. He doubted not that his brethren would realize that he was their friend and was anxious to help them. He was confident as their leader, when God's providence would open the door for them to leave Egypt.

But all his dreams faded when, next day, he perceived that there was no such loving among his brethren, and that they were ready to deliver him to the Egyptian authorities. Thoroughly discouraged and fearing for his life, Moses fled to the wilderness of Midian. It looked as though all his education and development had gone to waste.

Moses Jethro's Shepherd.

As the fugitive set upon the using of a well, shepherds brought their flocks for water. Amongst the shepherds were Jethro's daughters, and opposing them some arrogant shepherd, who hindered them. Moses took their part, and drew water for their flocks. Incidentally he was walked with them to ward their home.

Jethro was appreciative of the stranger, who did not disclose his identity. Moses was thoroughly crestfallen, meek, teachable.

Moses married one of Jethro's daughters and continued to be a shepherd for forty years. He did not at the time understand the Lord's providence in his affairs, but he was all those years learning a most important lesson of meekness, of full submission to the Divine will. When the lesson had been learned, God's time had come to put His thus doubly educated servant into a most important place, for which he never could have been qualified without just such experiences.

God's dealings with Moses illustrate the general principles of His dealing with all those whom He would use in special service.

A MINIATURE WORLD.

Our Little World Swinging In Space, Goes On. We Make Friends, Find Lovers, Develop Hates, in a Little While It All Dissolves; we Scatter as Star-Mist.

An ocean liner is a miniature world.

Here are a number of people, coming from "out of the nowhere into the here," thrown together a week or two (we go the Mediterranean route) and then scattered, never to see each other again. It is an image of your life and mine.

We are all human beings, but we act as if we were creatures of different clay. The first-class passengers from the height of the promenade deck look down upon the steerage as they might look upon some animals. The steerage people look up at them across oceans of social space. You cannot help wondering how soon they would all get acquainted if there should be a shipwreck; and what a reversal of social standing there would be if all were cast upon a desert island; for as like as not some man down there on the greasy lower deck is the Admiral Chichon with the brain to rule.

Then the sailors slip by and never speak to the passengers. Perhaps they are forbidden. It is a German boat, and almost everything is forbidden. But I wonder what they think, what their lives are, as they doubtless wonder about me. They go about endlessly polishing brasses and scrubbing decks and painting woodwork.

Down in the bowels of the ship are people at work in the dark. Stokers are shoveling coal. They can only stand it for an hour or so; they must frequently rest and come to the fresh air to breathe. They are half naked, covered with sweat and coal dust.

Then there are cooks and scullion and innumerable stewards, all at work attending to the comfort of the passengers, because the passengers have money. Why? Because they brought the money on board with them. There again is your world. Children born into it to be waited upon, others born to serve them, most controlled by conditions that happened before they came aboard.

Some of the passengers are sociable. Others are exclusive. A man and his wife have the stateroom de luxe, which costs an enormous price; they take their meals in their room, they sit quite isolated on the deck when they take air, they have spoken to no one; yet they dress extravagantly, surely for us all to see. I don't believe they are people. They are "characters" of the New York smart set, escaped from one of the society novels. What a lot of pains they take to be bored!

Outside is the opal sky and the ever-moving sea and the clouds and the majesty of great nature; and in the smoking room is a man who has played 134 games of solitaire and smoked perhaps 234 pipefuls of tobacco since he embarked. And haven't you met people like that?

Our little world, swinging in space, goes on; we make friends, find lovers, develop hates; in a little while it all dissolves; we scatter, as star-mist. —Atlanta Journal.
