THE MATRON'S STORY.

She Gets the Advantage—A Rare Case.

I was not a girl when this happened, I was a young matron with several children, but I looked as young, perhaps, as 25.

I took the trolley at my home town to go into a larger one for a day's shopping.

The only vacant seat was by the side of a dapper young traveling man. I took it, and he very kindly moved his baggage to make me comfortable. After a time he inquired about a certain noticeable sign by the wayside and I explained it to him. We fell naturally into a pleasant conversation which we both enjoyed. I did not think to tell him I was married—I supposed every man would guess it from my manners. I felt married—I supposed I looked it.

Finally he said, "I often make G—on my trips (G—was my town,) would you mind telling me what business your people are in?"

I told him and we talked at considerable length about the advantages and disadvantages of that particular calling. He mentioned several young men and a girl whom I knew and that furnished us with more material for talk.

We were both feeling quite jolly when I reached my destination, the man explaining with evident regret that he was obliged to go on in to "the house," as he called his firm in the city. He suddenly became "smart" and objectionable.

He rose when I did and held out his hand. The car had come to a dead stop and passengers were beginning to alight. The young man spoke in a loud confident voice plainly audible to all passengers, many of whom I knew, and this is what he said:

"I have not seen all I mean to of you by no means. I shall certainly follow up this clew. I'll be in G—in about two weeks. Now don't forget me for I'm coming to see you, without fail.

"Do," I said as cordially as I could in face of my mortification, "I think my husband will give you an order."

JOY EVERYWHERE.

Compulsion is not, indeed, the final appeal to man, but joy is. And joy is everywhere; it is in the earth's green covering of grass; in the blue serenity of the sky; in reckless exuberance of spring; in the severe abstinence of gray winter; in the living flesh that animates our bodily frame; in the perfect poise of the human figure, noble and upright; in living in the exercise of all our powers; in the acquisition of knowledge; in the fighting of evils; in dying for gains we never can share. Joy is every where; it is superfluous, unnecessary; nay, it very often contradicts the most peremptory behests of necessity. It exists to show that the bonds of law can only be explained by love; they are like body and soul. Joy is the realization of the truth of oneness, the oneness of our soul with the world and of the world-soul with the supreme lover.

WOMAN LIKE.

"Judge," said the forewoman of the jury of ladies, "we want to speak to you about that sealed verdict we just rendered."

"Well, ladies?"

"Can we unseal it and add a postscript?"—Washington Herald.

A woman never feels absolutely sure that her husband has loose habits until he comes home tight.

Psyche Knot in a Modern Coiffure

BY way of departing from the close-to-the-head hairdress some of our modern goddesses have dared to combine the old classic Psyche knot with a strictly twentieth century arrangement of the front hair. An example is pictured here, and the effect is rather pretty. It is better from the front than from the side, because in the modern hair dress the brow is more or less covered. The line is not so good, therefore, as in the classic model.

The Greeks covered the ears (or most of them), but did not bring the hair out over the cheek as in the present mode. A prominent actress, who gives much thought to dress, is responsible for this mixture of styles. Many centuries apart, the ideas are not too incongruous, and the resulting coiffure has found a number of devotees.

The arrangement is simple enough. The front hair is trimmed in a light fringe across the forehead, and sloping upward over the temples. The side hair is parted off and rolled into a soft twist. It is laid in a coil in front of the ear and pinned to place with short wire pins. The end is twisted and brought to the knot, under which it is concealed.

All the back hair is combed back and tied at the back below the crown. It is pulled out to lie loosely at the top of the head and nape of the neck. The hair is then rolled loosely, coiled in a small coil and pinned with a few wire pins. The center of the coil is pulled out into the projecting knot, as shown in the picture, and additional pins placed to hold it firmly.

The new coiffures are still in the experimental stage. The high hairdress and the colonial styles are bidding for popular favor. We know that changes are coming because new millinery makes them necessary. We may be fairly certain that high styles will be worn, and perfectly certain that coiffures are not to be as plain as they have been. But no one mode has seized the popular fancy as yet. Therefore actresses and others are free to experiment and mix up the styles of Egypt with those of the Moqui Indians if they wish, at their own sweet will. No centuries or peoples are too remote to be without the pale of our interest when it comes to getting ideas for new styles.

THE OLD ARM CHAIR.

I love it, I love it and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm-chair?
I've treasured it long as a sainted prize;
I've bedewed it with tears, and embalm'd it with sighs,
'Tis bound by a thousand bands to my heart;
Not a tie will break, not a link will start,
Would ye learn the spell?—a mother sat there;
And a sacred thing is that old arm-chair.

In childhood's hour I lingered near,
The hallow'd seat with listening ear;
And gentle words that mother would give
To fit me to die, and teach me to live.
She told me shame would never bestride,
With truth for my creed and God for my guide;
She taught me to hush my earliest prayer,
As I knelt beside that old arm-chair.

I sat and watch'd her many a day,
When her eye, grew dim, and her locks were gray;
I almost worshipp'd her when she smiled,
And turn'd from her Bible, to bless her child.
Years roll'd on; but the last one sped—
My idols were shattered; my earth-star fled;
I learnt how much the heart can bear,
When I saw her die in that old arm-chair.

'Tis past, 'tis past, but I gaze on it now,
With quivering breath and throbbing brow;
'Twas there she nursed me; 'twas there she died;
And memory flows with lava tide.
Say it is folly, and deem me weak,
While the scalding drops start down my cheek;
But I love it, I love it, and cannot rear
My soul from my mother's old arm-chair.

MIGHT HAVE HELPED.

Speaking in a Washington club the other night of overcoming difficulties, Congressman John M. Nelson of Wisconsin told of the happy thought of little Gladys.

Some time ago, according to the congressman, little Gladys sat watching her mother ironing some white frocks. The day was very warm and mother was rather weary.

"Mamma," finally asked the youngster, "isn't it awfully hard to iron?"

"Yes, dear," answered the tired parent, with a gentle sigh, "sometimes it is very hard."

For a moment the little girl was very thoughtful, and then came a ray of sunshine that rippled over her pretty features.

"Oh, mamma," she enthusiastically exclaimed, "wouldn't it have been fine if you had married a Chinese?"—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

Explained.

A Belfast tradesman stepped into a barber's shop the other day, and while he was being shaved the barber was wondering if this was a new customer.

"Have you ever been here for a shave before?" asked the barber.

"Yes, once," was the reply.

"But I do not remember your face, sir."

"Well, I daresay you don't," said the customer. "Ye see, it's a healed up noo."—The Shamrock.

POOR HUBBY.

Hubby—I can't eat those biscuits. They are like rocks.

Wife—Didn't I graduate from cooking school just before you married me?

Hubby—Yes. I should have waited until you forgot what you learned there.

All Disown Him.

The candidate soon takes his cue and promptly comes across. The fashion nowadays is to repudiate the boss.

Proper Regulation.

Mrs. Smith (to chemist)—I wish to buy a thermometer to regulate the heat of the room.

Chemist—What kind will you have, madam?

Mrs. S.—Oh, it does not matter, so you set it at 65, as the doctor said that would be the proper heat.—National Monthly.

Of the Nobility.

"I understand your daughter is going to marry a title."

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox.

"You seem rather gloomy about it."

"Well, every joy has its shadow of sorrow. I have a favorite horse named Princes and a favorite dog named Duke. I don't know which I'll have to get rid of to avoid confusion in the family."

Don't Hear of the Others.

Dick—Say, old man, I can get Brown's car. What do you say to a joy ride?

Tom—No, thank you. About all the joy rides I've heard of have been followed by a funeral.

GOOD SCHEME.

He—What do you say to an elopement some day next week?

She—Good! What day? I want to tell pa and ma.
