WHY TEACHERS AGE EARLY.

Fearful and Wonderful Excuses Given for Occasional Nonattendance of their Pupils

While the law of the land compels children to attend school up to a certain age, there is no law that makes it obligatory for them to be present at every session. They may be "excused" on the written request of parents, and we here present some of these reasonable excuses:

"Dear Miss Blank: Sadie had a pain in her left hand and could not come yesterday. If it goes to continue today, please let her wait home and oblige. Mrs. B. P. C."

"Kind Friend: Kindly excuse James for lateness. I knoed him after breakfast."

"Dear Miss H—: Why was not there yesterday because he had to have his shoes half-soled. They were so holey his feet got wet and I was afraid he would get tonsillitis. His constitution is of the best. It is some Hereditary on his pa's side him being pulling. So excuse."—New York Evening Post.

HIS REASONING WAS GOOD.

A certain young man's friends thought he was dead, but he was only in a state of coma, says Tit-Bits. When, in ample time to avoid being buried, he showed signs of life he was asked how it seemed to be dead.

"Dead!" he exclaimed. "I wasn't dead. I knew all the time what was going on. And I knew I wasn't dead, too, because my feet were cold and I was hungry."

"But how did that fact make you think you were still alive?" asked one of the curious.

"Well, this way. I knew that if I were in heaven I wouldn't be hungry. And if I was in the other place my feet wouldn't be cold."

And occasionally a man has money in a bank because he does not own an automobile.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. Atontatus Lyon, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago gave to womanhood a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

WOOD'S SEEDS

make larger growth than cow peas or any other soil-improving crop; also cost less to seed per acre.

It only requires about a peck to seed an acre, and they make such a rapid and enormous growth that they soon cover the ground wherever they are sown. Plant in rows four to five feet apart, dropping two or three beans about a foot apart in the row.

DID YOU?

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of mine, And bearing about all the burden he can. Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue, And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.

Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill. Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road, Or did you just let him go with his load?

Do you know what it means to be losing the fight, When a lift just in time might set everything right? Do you know what it means—just a clasp of a hand—When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?

Did you ask what it was—why the quivering lip? Why the half-suppressed sob, and the scalding tears drip? Were you brother of his when the time came of need? Did you offer to help him, or didn't you heed?

WHAT SORT OF A FATHER ARE YOU.

Fathers, you are only reaping just what you sowed. For it's true, to a great extent, just the sort of a father you are, is just the sort of a son you are going to have. For did you ever notice that a little boy tries to do everything he sees father do? He thinks whatever papa says and does is just the right thing to do. Fathers, be careful what you say and how you say it, what you do and how you do it. For God surely holds you accountable for the way you raise the precious boy He has given you.

What sort of a father are you to your boy? Do you know if your standing is good? Do you ever take stock of yourself and check up Your accounts with the boy, as you should? Do you ever reflect on your conduct with him? Are you all that a father should be? Do you send him away when you are anxious to read, Or let him climb up on your knee?

Is a paper more important to you than his talk? Do you find that his chatter annoys? Would you rather be quiet than have him about? Do you send him away with his toys? Have you time to bestow on the boy when he comes With his questions—to tell him the truth? Or do you neglect him and leave him alone To work out the problems of youth?

Do you ever go walking with him, hand in hand? Do you plan little outings for him? Does he ever look forward to romping with you, Or are you eternally grim? What memories pleasant of you will he have In the years that are certain to come? Will he look back on youth as a season of joy, Or an age that was woefully grim?

Come, fathers, reflect! Does he know you today, And do you know him as you should? Are other things so important to you That you leave it to chance that your boy will be good? Take stock of yourself and consider the lad, Your time and your thought are his due. How would you answer your God should He ask, What sort of a father are you?

TRUE LOVE.

For Every Drachm of Honey Found in Love "A Pound of Gall Doth Over it Redound."

"The course of true love never did run smooth," according to Lycander, and if it is the real thing only when it hangs on until the edge of doom, and the going is rough all the way, those who have the actual germ implanted in them need attention.

You may shake off Spring fever or get a hypnotist to rid you of hypochondria, but Sir Walter Scott, who wrote a good many books in which love was as "unconquerable in the fight" as Sophocles declared it to be in "Antigone," says that stemming a stream with sand, or fettering flame with flaxen band is a cinch compared with trying to cure love-sickness by "firm resolve."

Buckingham, in an Ode to Love, declares that it is the salt of life, and that it gives a higher taste to pleasure and makes it last. But perhaps the poet was in love when he wrote the lines, and, therefore, in no state to be dispassionately informing, and in a normal state he didn't give a hang for the verities.

Cynics are inclined to trust Spencer more than Buckingham and Spencer says that for every drachm of honey found in love "a pound of gall doth over it redound."

WORE IT BEFORE.

The judge looked at the prisoner keenly for a few moments and then said: "It strikes me forcibly I have seen your face before."

"That's where I always wear it," replied the prisoner, sullenly. Then the court laughed and it took sometime to restore order—Pearson's Weekly.

SCOTCH THEOLOGY.

An Edinburgh cabman was driving an American round the sights of the Northern city, says The Westminster Gazette. In High street he stopped and with a wave of his whip announced:

"That is John Knox's house." "John Knox?" exclaimed the American; "who was he?" "This was too much for the cabby. "Good heavens, man," he exclaimed, "did you never read your Bible?"

SAW HIS IMAGE.

A man went to a judge, and asked whether he could bring suit for slander against a man who had called him a rhinoceros.

"Why, certainly," said the judge. "When did he call you that?" "About three years ago." "Three years ago! And you only start suit today!" "But, your honor, yesterday I saw a rhinoceros for the first time."

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The hour may be cheerless and somber with clouds, but it will be no better to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the clouds that makes flowers. The sky is blue twice where it is black once. You have troubles—so have others. None are free from them. That would be a dull sea and the sailors would never get skill were there nothing to disturb its surface. There is more virtue in a sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of cloud and gloom.

When a girl begins to talk she may be a speaking likeness of her mother.

FATHER AND SON.

The Boy That is a Companion of "Dad" All the Way May Not Know More Than The Boy That Had Drifted From His Father, But He Has Less to Learn.

Fathers and sons do not have enough of each other's society. So parent is the fact that Mayor Baker of Cleveland, Ohio, has issued a proclamation asking for an increased intimacy and closing with these words:

"If we can begin the new year with the resolve that our sons shall be more our companions and our fathers more our comrades it will add both to the sweetness of our private life and to the value of our citizenship."

Mayor Baker is the first of 500 mayors of American cities to join officially in the "Father and Son" movement started in Cleveland, and which has gone east as far as Bangor, Maine, and west as far as Denver.

The average father and son are pretty good comrades up to the time that the boy becomes of high school age. They play together and work together. One sees them taking long walks on Sunday, and going fishing on holidays. The boy can have a better time with his "dad" than with any of his playmates, and as for "dad," he would rather lose a finger than disappoint the "kid." So they continue comrades and pals up to the very time that the boy needs father the most, and the father needs the boy, then they separate. In the next five years the Y. M. C. A. secretary of the athletic coach can tell the father more about his son than he knows himself.

When the boy goes away to school and forms new associations the distance between the two increases. A surprising number of the letters from fathers to sons in college takes the form of hastily scribbled checks. At the end of school days father and son feel an ill defined uneasiness in each other's presence. They have nothing in common. The father fears that the son may think him old-fashioned, and the son fancies, expecting every moment some solemnly delivered "good advice."

It is unfortunate that it is so, but the fact may as well be faced. There are exceptions and these constitute a peculiarly happy contrast. What is finer, indeed, than the sight of a youth admitted into the circle of his father's friends? The boy that is a companion of "dad" all the way may not know more than the boy that had drifted from his father, but he has less to learn.

OUR GOLDEN RULE.

Let us make it our duty and pleasure from this time forth to spread such an influence around us that whoever we may come in contact with will be made better and happier by having known us, so that our golden rule will be: "Never drop a speech that could carry sorrow to any heart, wherever our words might reach." It has been beautifully said that "woman is the crown of creation." God grant that each of us shall add a precious jewel to this glorious crown that shall shine through endless ages.
